JORGENSEN-WILLING
A quite ceremony attended those friends and members of immediate families.

BOARD TO MEET
Members of the Board of County Commissioners will meet in special session here Thursday.

NEW MEN
Two groups of new enrollees, one of 21 members and another of 11, were received last week at Camp Sapona.

VACATION
Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Slack left Saturday for Sunbury.

RELATIVES HERE THIS WEEK
Mr. and Mrs. Houston Robbins and family visited relatives here last week-end.

Mrs. Emma Thompson, of Raleigh, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thompson, here last week-end.

Pearce Cramer, who spent the past year in Panama, arrived Tuesday for a vacation with his parents, Judge and Mrs. E. H. Cramer.

Mrs. Norton Bellamy and children, Bob and Carolyn, of Washington, are guests this week at the Grimes House.

W. C. Lindsey, of Charlotte, and R. M. Callahan, of Forest City, were guests at the Grimes House the first of the week.

Miss Lela Barnes, who has been employed here for the past few months at the WPA office, returned to her home in Fayetteville last week.

H. B. Smith and Warren Doshier, both of whom are employed at the Ethyl-Dow Chemical Company plant at Kures Beach, visited their respective families here last week-end.

Penna., to visit the former's parents. They will be away for about two weeks. Mrs. Slack is the former Miss Louise Marks.

RETURN HOME
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson returned home last Wednesday from a two-weeks vacation up north.

AT HOME
George Watson is visiting his mother, Mrs. Ida Potter Watson, while on a temporary leave of absence from his steamship company.

APPENDECTOMY
Miss Eula Mae Long was rushed to the Brunswick Hospital on Monday afternoon for an appendix operation.

RETURNS HOME
R. D. White, prominent Shallotte business man, returned home Friday from Duke Hospital, in Durham, where he underwent an operation last week.

IMPROVEMENT
Improvement continues in the condition of Chief of Police Hook Moore, who suffered a stroke several weeks ago.

IMPROVING
Friends will be glad to learn that the condition of James Wolfe, who has been in a critical condition at the Brunswick County Hospital, is considerably improved.

PICNIC
Members of the Lanville Presbyterian Sunday School enjoyed their annual picnic Friday afternoon at Lake Waccamaw. In addition to the eighty-six members present the picnic was attended by the Sunday School superintendent, J. A. Bodine, and the pastor of the church, J. D. Withrow.

CHILD BETTER
The condition of little Billie Doshier, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Doshier, who has been seriously ill at the Babies Hospital at Wrightsville Beach, is much improved.

Lt. John W. Sample and Mrs. Sample are away this week on vacation. Lt. Sample is commanding officer at Camp Sapona.

ADVERTISEMENT
A. G. Huggins, of Shallotte, has a tire cover on the back of his automobile which gives a cartoonist's impression of a State Port Pilot reader as he gets the advertising message from the weekly ad of the Shallotte Trading Company. William Holmes drew the picture.

MARRIAGE LICENSES
During the past week two white couples obtained their marriage licenses from the local office of the Register of Deeds. The contracting couples were Miss Elsie Willing to William Jorgensen, both of Southport; Miss Callie Mae Outlaw, Mount Olive, to William Henry Harrill, Leland.

SUNDAY VISITOR
The Barabee, of Norfolk, hand-some cabin cruiser of J. R. Newton, formerly of Fayetteville, spent Sunday afternoon here with Mr. Newton and party aboard. The Barabee won the President's Cup in the New York powerboat races this year. She came down the Cape Fear at about 25 miles per hour. Her cruising speed was said to be 35 miles per hour, and that is some speed for a boat to maintain.

KIND OFFER
The White Ice Cream Company of Wilmington has offered the free use of its truck and loud speaker for the purpose of making announcements at the boat races here in August. Although programs will be mimeographed and distributed just before the start of each day's racing, the loud speaker will be valuable for the purpose of keeping spectators advised as to the progress each boat is making, especially when they are at distant points.

TWO FORESTERS RESCUED FROM GREEN SWAMP

L. E. Fisher, another member of the party. The going, they said, was pretty tough, as the swamp is thickly grown with underbrush. Fisher was to return to their point of entrance and attempt to get an automobile into the swamp from another angle. When he left the young men they proceeded on into the swamp to a place which they could not get through. When Fisher left the two personable young men they were on Moore's Island, about three miles southwest of a road built by the CCC at a point about a mile and a half from the place where the road crosses Town Creek, they said. Continuing their work, they pushed their way through the heavy underbrush to a point 6 1/2 miles in the swamp, which is just about the midway point of the great morass. Here they found they could no longer break through the heavy growth, and the intense heat made work almost impossible. They decided to return to Wilmington, and then discovered they were lost. Heat Intense
The heat was so intense they could not move through the heavy undergrowth, Hale said, and the mosquitoes became a serious problem. Briars and thorns tore at their clothing, their faces and hands, and ripped their boots to pieces. They had no water and no food and the heat made progress impossible while the sun was shining. So they rested a bit, Hale said, and when the sun had gone down made another attempt to get out of the jungle-like growth. They spent the night in the swamp fighting the mosquitoes and wishing for water and food. Hale said, as it was impossible to move in the darkness without suffering the torment of thousands of briars and bushes tearing at their faces, hands and legs. Their boots and trousers were hanging in shreds and their faces and hands were badly scratched and cut. In the morning Carow was in no condition to push through the swamp, Hale said, and Hale decided to push on in an attempt to reach the outside of the swamp and bring aid to his companion. Hale, after long hours of work in the intense heat, was able to regain Moore's Island, and decided to go back, bring Carow up to the island, and then push on to the outside for help to bring Carow back to Wilmington. On his way back to the spot where he had left Carow he found his companion struggling to get through, Hale said. The heat again made progress impossible and they decided it would be necessary to spend another night in the mosquito infested swamp. Consumed Water Supply

They had drunk the quart of water they had with them on Wednesday and had been unable to locate any in the morass which was suitable for drinking purposes. Hungry, hot and weary, they settled down to another night of fighting the myriads of mosquitoes. A light shower gave them some relief from the heat, Hale said, and they were able to catch a few drops of the cooling rain as it fell, but far from enough to quench their thirst. Meanwhile a large rescue party had been formed to search for the missing men. Led by Frank Rabon, of Winnabow, the party, comprised of P. H. Gallagher, engineer, and Vallie Frederic, forester, of Camp Sapona; L. E. Fisher, A. A. Pierce and Archie Tolter, all U. S. foresters; Dawson Jones, Brunswick county fire warden, a man named Reese and about ten other men from the Green Swamp area, entered the swamp in their search. At 12:30 o'clock Friday morning the two lost men heard the halloo of the searchers, and Hale said it was the most welcome sound he ever heard. Two young Federal foresters were rescued last Friday morning from the dense undergrowth of the Green Swamp after being lost for two days and nights. The first thing the two men asked for was water, members of the rescue party said, and proceeded to drink a half-gallon apiece. But the work wasn't all finished yet, for they still had to work their way out of the swamp. Five hours later they reached Wilmington, tired, hungry, still thirsty but glad to be alive. The two young men were telling their friends about it rather quietly Friday morning. It was quite an experience, they said, and Green Swamp is the toughest they have tackled in the thirteen states in which they have worked. But they will go back in to complete the job they began. They will enter from a different point, Hale said, and will probably try to cut their way through, this time. Usually he said, they cut nothing, but break their way through the thick places with a staff. But they will rest for a couple days first, Hale said. During their two day and two night stay in the swamp both lost weight, Carow losing ten (Continued on Page 4)
