and Southport fishing. All had been here before, but, this visit in company with a group of fellow sportsmen from Washington, D. C., was about the best trip they have had, according to Mr. Powell. This despite the fact that the weather was too rough for real fishing most of the time while here.

One day out on the Gulf Stream, resulted in the party bringing in five barracuda. The largest one weighed 30 pounds.

This fish was taken by Mr. Powell and it is an interesting fact that every member of the party caught either a dolphin or a barracuda; F. M. Pratt of Washington took a 22-pound bull dolphin.

Yesterday morning the party went out for a short while for blue fish and mackerel, taking all they wanted in a couple of hours. The mackerel, in line with those being taken now by other parties, were very large, some weighing four and five pounds.

The Washington members of the party are remaining over until Thursday, being off on the Gulf Stream today for another go at the big game fish. This unit of the party is composed of F. M. Pratt, S. P. Spitz and Robert T. Highfield. All are prominent Washington business men in addition to being widely known sportsmen. Today they hope to make something in the way of a record catch of barracuda, dolphin and amberjack.
