

Suggests Plant Beds Be Narrow

Narrow Tobacco Plant Beds Produce More Plants Per Square Yard Says State College Specialist

Four good reasons for constructing a narrow tobacco plant bed are listed in pre-season recommendations to tobacco growers by Dr. Luther Shaw, plant pathologist of N. C. State College. He also suggests the importance of the proper location for the plant bed.

"If the tobacco bed is built narrow," Dr. Shaw said, "more plants are produced per square yard; the danger of tramping on plants while weeding or pulling is avoided; the plants can be watered more easily and uniformly; and fourth, and most important, narrow beds can be equipped and treated for blue mold with more satisfactory results than wide ones."

The plant pathologist recommends that the plant bed be 5 feet 8 inches wide to allow the standard six-foot cover to fit snugly when the fumigation method is used to control blue mold. A pathway 18 inches to 2 feet wide should be left between adjacent beds.

"The benzol or paradichlorobenzene fumigation methods are the best for controlling blue mold," Dr. Shaw declared. "Copper-oxide spray is also satisfactory when applied in advance of the first appearance of the disease on the farm. The spray acts best as a preventative, while the fumigants will kill the mold after it has infected the plant bed."

The State College specialist also suggests that the plant bed be located convenient to a source of water, and preferably near the house, because constant attention is required during the development of the young plants. "It is also desirable," he says, "to locate the beds so that they will be protected as much as possible from strong winds."

Brooks Leaf House Here Leased By Motleys, Hayes

Five-Year Lease On The Brooks Tobacco Warehouse Here Is Filed For Record Latter Part Of The Week

The Brooks tobacco warehouse here, which for the past two years has been operated by the owners, J. R. and C. B. Brooks, has been leased for the next five years by L. H. Motley, Blair Motley, of Danville, Va., and Frank A. Hayes, of Reidsville.

The lease was filed for record here the latter part of the week, and is signed by J. R. Brooks and wife, Lena H. Brooks, and C. B. Brooks and wife, Martha S. Brooks.

Provision is made in the instrument giving the lessees the option of purchasing the warehouse for a designated figure at the end of the five year leased period if desired.

The Brooks brothers purchased the warehouse from W. B. Daniel and A. H. Moore on February 1, 1938, and operated it for two years. They are natives of Kingston and operate a large warehouse there.

To the people of Columbus county, the new operators of the warehouse need no introduction, since they have long been on the Whiteville market, associated with various warehouse interests through a period of years. Mr. Hayes has been coming to Whiteville for the past twenty years or more, in both capacity as auctioneer and warehouseman.

they are selling something. The boys and girls are their own officers, they pay themselves wages; they are both capital and labor.

Here's what they manufacture and sell: sterling silver jewelry, pottery, leather desk sets, office furniture, book-ends, printing, hearth-brooms. I went into their display rooms in New York and was astonished at the wide variety of things the boys and girls manufacture and sell.

Now you'll be asking how much money they have to raise to go into business. From $50 to $75. They get this money by selling stock at about fifty cents a share. Then they pay interest on the stock. The stockholders meet once a year (the boys and girls) and vote the amount of dividends to go to the stockholders. What the boys and girls are really doing is running a business of their own. They learn how to manufacture and sell and they learn the problems of both capital and labor.

Here's an example of what one boy did: He was from Flushing, New York, where the World's Fair is being held. He developed unusual skill in handicraft. This won him a scholarship and from that he went into the art department of a New York advertising agency and is now making $5,000 a year. Of course this is exceptional, but it shows how Junior Achievement works.

There are about 900 Junior Achievements in the United States. If one is not near you, you can help organize a company.

Smith disliked having his photograph taken, but one day a thought struck him and he agreed to his wife's request that he should face the camera.

The proofs came back. When his wife saw them she exclaimed, "Oh, Arthur, you've only one button on your coat!"

"Thank goodness," he replied, "you have noticed it at last. That's why I had the photo taken."

Author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

If you are a boy or a girl between 16 and 21 years old, how would you like to step up your chances of getting a job? Well, this column today will tell you how to go about it. This method does not assure you a job, but it will increase your chances.

Here's how it will increase your chances: In some cities unemployment among boys and girls of this age runs as high as 48 percent. Among the boys and girls, who have taken advantage of the offer I am going to outline, the unemployment has been cut down to 2 percent.

It is by means of a nation-wide organization called "Junior Achievement." You have probably never heard of it, but it is a big organization and is today helping 15,000 boys and girls to better themselves. The national headquarters of this organization are at 16 East 48th Street, New York City.

This is the way Junior Achievement works. It does not go out and ring doorbells and get you a job, but helps you to make a job for yourself. It helps you set up in business for yourself. Yes, it helps you become part owner of a small business. You may even be the president of the business. Sounds astonishing, but that's the way it works.

It takes a group of about fifteen boys and girls between the ages given above, and organizes them and helps them draw up articles of incorporation. And then they start a business. Officers are elected, stock is sold, money is raised, and pretty soon

Charles, a city boy, was visiting his grandparents in the country. All the morning he helped his grandpa pick cucumber pickles. Later in the day they delivered them to the grocery, where the grocery had a row of watermelons lined up for sale.

"Oh, grandpa! Look at those big pickles!" said Charles.

"What we want," said the patriotic citizen, "is a government that will give every man an absolutely equal show."

"It can't be arranged," replied Threeding Sam; "anyway, not here in Crimson Gulch, there's no sense in expecting everybody to have four aces when a jack-pot is opened."

of the sermon and various other events of the day. It is understood that this week's issue of that widely famed pictorial magazine will carry an illustrated story of the Orton Plantation Christmas Party.

The cameraman was also in his element with something exciting when he got pictures of the greased pole climbing, greased pig chasing and other interesting and old time sports that made up the day's program.

One of the most interesting series of pictures in the opinion of the cameraman, was a race between two large bulls, ridden by negro men. These critters went through all the prancing at the post that usually attends a horse race. When their jockeys lured them out for the race and laid on with heel and switch the bulls went in a manner that would put the average racing nag to shame.

Not the least of the days event's were the presents for everybody and a great dinner.

The fox was like the children who crossed the road, only it just not make it.

It is likely that a fox is killed in Brunswick each year as a result of carelessness attitude towards automobiles. They act very much as if they are approaching a road beat the car to the crossing. The results are often the same. This little story is not just as a warning to the towns of Brunswick county; they are fully welcome to use their judgment.

All of the above parties have large packs of well trained fox hounds, Mr. Boger having 30 of the animals. Excepting a half dozen of the Boger hounds, which Dr. Davis had here for a month last fall, all of the dogs that are expected this time are used to running red foxes, with a different habit from that of the local swamp grays.

The local foxes may confuse the dogs for the first two or three hunts, judging by the experiences last fall, the dogs will quickly catch on to the tricks.

YOUR CHILD'S coughing at night—caused by throat "tickle" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing the throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime.
