Our Helpmate

When asked last week how he was getting on, little six-year-old Wesley Dasher replied: "Well, I've been two days and I don't read or write, it looks like a waste of time!"

When we have to say this week that the Surgical Dressings project is that if our boys down at the Seaboard and over in the States don't fight any more than the majority of women in Southport are folding bandages, we might just as well start writing the words to "Deutschlandlied."

When ten or fifteen women get together it's amazing the number of varied subjects conversely will touch on in two hours. At the Red Cross workroom the other day we learned, among other things:

Clara Pigott has a peculiar and Lella humors it. Every time there is one thing he must get on the table, and that's time with fruit cocktail.

Some of those present had finished "Drivin' Woman" and were crazy about it. Personing we think the authoress ad "Gone With The Wind" so that she patterned her book closely after it.

Hannah Reece (Mrs. Carey) until about a year ago made her home here has joined the A.S. In order to do so she had the children over to Carey and guardian and then was Des Boines. Hannah will be a good one, because she knows of no one who packs as much dynamite in as small a package. As tiny as she is, we'd like her to be our sergeant.

Winnie Willis tells us that she is starting on the road to the States. She hopes to put in the next three weeks in the center in the next three weeks to be among those who go to Bragg. The middle of October she will be about two weeks work in three weeks, we expect and passes her physical. She'll be among those we
