which is a pretty good rating for a boy only twenty. Irvin went to Clemson College for a while before going in the service.

We could say something about the world being small, but we won't. It's getting to be the usual thing to meet homefolks away from home, and this can't compare with David Watson and Bill Styron meeting out in the South Pacific. After all, this was only Central Park.

Another item we pass on for local consumption is that when we went to see the show at Radio City Music Hall, we saw the "March of Time" which we saw at the Amuzu Theatre in Southport three weeks ago.

One more thing—on the way up on the train, the young son struck up a conversation with a very amiable lady. Their conversation was congenial enough to start with, but when the lady turned out to be Mrs. Jesse Weeks, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weeks, of Southport, and she found out she was talking with a native of Southport it turned into a "Do you know so and so?" conversation.

Mrs. Weeks and her son were on their way to New York to visit relatives. They were much interested in Southport and asked to be remembered to their friends here.

Lighter Side

Chief Bason's Mate and is stationed in Wilmington.

Upon full confession that it was, he identified himself as Irvin Joy, who until a few years ago made his home in Southport. Irvin is now a tall, good looking young man and a glance at his sleeve revealed that he is a signalman, second class, in the Navy

Friends of Miss Margaret Doshier, of Southport, are glad to know that her eyesight is now very much improved. As stenographer in the law office of Dwight McEwen, Miss Doshier was compelled to stop work because of eye trouble, several weeks ago.

Mrs. S. H. Veazy and little son of Wilmington spent Sunday here with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Doshier.

When Actions Speak Louder Than Words

The patriotic manner in which telephone men and women have carried on since Pearl Harbor speaks louder than words. When war started telephone workers were already in the midst of the greatest construction program ever undertaken. As war progressed their job grew more complicated. However, every war telephone service demand was met on or ahead of schedule, though it meant working long extra hours day after day.

While doing this tremendous war job, the urgent telephone needs of the public were not forgotten. There are today more than 500,000 more telephones in service in the Southern Bell territory than in 1940, and service is being maintained in spite of the fact that nearly one-third of our male employees are in the armed forces. Telephone operators are now completing more than 450,000 more calls each month than in the summer months of 1940. Accepting their responsibilities as citizens, telephone folks have purchased millions of dollars of War Bonds and are continuing to invest more than ten per cent of their regular wages every month in bonds. You will find them doing Red Cross work—nurse's aid work—donating their blood—in fact you'll find telephone folks in nearly every civic movement designed to aid in our war effort and the betterment of the communities in which they live.

Telephone workers have accepted their wartime responsibilities, appreciating the vital part they have in the successful prosecution of the war—shouldering their tasks cheerfully and unselfishly as the men in arms shoulder their guns.
