

Clarence Holden Rough Waters Died Thursday For First Fishing

Native Of Southport And Brother Of Assistant Clerk Of Court Died Thursday At His Home At Aucubon

Clarence Holden, 71-year old native of southport, resident of New Hanover county for many years, died at his home at Aucubon Thursday. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Addie Holden and a son, C. E. Holden, both of Aucubon; and by one brother, Assistant Clerk of Superior Court, J. Holden, of Southport.

winds made the going too rough to go out for game fish so they turned to sea bass, catching about 125 pounds of nice large fish before the rough winds forced them back to port.

The party was composed of D. D. Sudderth, John Beard, O. P. Lutz, W. H. Strickland and Billy Strickland, all of Lenoir. They were taken out in the boat of Captain H. T. Bowner. Mr. Lutz, alawyer, said he had been coming to Southport for his fishing for ten years. He thought that after the war there would be some real development of sport fishing along the Brunswick coast.

While only a few boats may be available for sport fishing at the start of this season there are indications that penty more will come in late on. Fishermen who have been denied their sport for the past three years will make up for all lost time, according to all reports and inquires that are being received. There are no estictions on fishing this year.

Plato's "Republic", most influential of all works of Utopian communism, urged that there should be no private property and no marriage.

The Rovin' Reporter

(Continued from page one) and girls. At the moment we were thinking of the wild three year old stallion who had jumped a six foot fence back home the previous night. We had lost all our sleep chasing him. We got through alright. In case you want to know. On our way we met the managing Editor. He is a most important personage on a daily paper. He's responsible for its looks, even when those working under him do not provide the wherewith to make sense. He has to write much of the headlines and to regulate each story to the page and the place on the page where it is best fitted to go and produce a harmonious mixture of good reading and appearance. Getting up the front page, its headlines and illustrations, would send anybody except a managing editor to the drug store in search of poison and the quickest way out.

From the Managing Editor we gravitated to the desks of the City Editor, thence to the Sports Editor and various other Editors, all just as important in their own rights as The Editor. Finally, after making a tour of the composing room, press and mailing rooms, we met up with the State News Editor. Before Slim could do the honors this influential person jumped to his feet, grasped us by the hand and exclaimed: "I'm the guy who has to cut half the stuff that you write for us, because we don't have enough newsprint."

Department Is Interested In Offshore Fishing Here

(Continued from page one) shrimpers have been acquiring would represent so much money spent for nothing. Unless assurance of State and Federal aid to development is given, the big boats will be going the way the other big boats have gone — to Louisiana, where the State and Federal governments really did some thing for development.

Director Etheridge informed the representative of local fishing interests that the State would cooperate to the fullest, but that North Carolina is without the costly equipment and trained technicians necessary for such work. He said that he would take the matter up with Washington immediately and see that something will be done by the State and Federal governments jointly.

WILL PRESENT SENIOR PLAY

(Continued from page one) over of South Carolina, played by Ralph Potter, who are mortally antagonistic. Their children, Margorie Byrd and Bob Rudd, played by Eleanor Reese and Bobby Brown, are not so antagonistic as their fathers. Mrs. J. John Carroll, a widow and Colonel Rudd's sister-in-law, is played by Elizabeth Davis and her daughter, Julia Carroll, by Betty Lee Oliver. Ned Graydon, a young man without a memory, is played by Nickie Coleman and Mr. James Baskom, Col. Rudd's lawyer, by Wallace Moore. Ching-ah-ling, the Chinese cook, played by Joe Walton, is a bit impertinent but far the most important individual in the cast.

The senior class hopes to have a good crowd and believes that everyone will really enjoy the play.

Southwestern Brunswick Thriving For Years Past

A few years after his return home Mr. Thomas decided to cut up the 3,000 acre tract into small farms of 50 and 60 acres. Proceeding on this plan, about all of the original tract has been sold and something like 30 new homes have been built within the decade. In addition many improvements have been made to other homes. The whole community presents an attractive appearance with nicely painted and well kept farm homes and lands, all self owned. Quite a number of these home and farm owners came to Brunswick from:
