Advice Given On Preserving Eggs

State College Professor Offers Suggestions On Best Methods In Use

Eggs produced during the heavy season of lay may now be preserved for use at the time when eggs are scarce, according to Prof. Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at State College.

In the past years the use of water glass solution was widely carried out for this purpose, he said, but with the recent widespread development of freezer lockers, a new opportunity exists.

Where the freezer locker is to be used, clean, fresh eggs should be broken into paraffined cups and refrigerated at zero temperature. If the entire content of the egg is to be frozen, the eggs should be broken into a clean bowl, and one tablespoon of corn syrup or sugar, or one teaspoonful of salt should be added to each cup of liquid eggs. Break yolks, but do not whip.

If yolks are frozen separate, add two tablespoons of corn syrup or sugar, or one teaspoon of salt to each cup of yolks and mix as for whole eggs. If the whites are packaged, nothing should be added. The containers should be moisture-vapor proof, and the product promptly. The eggs, when thawed, should be used immediately.

Undoubtedly, as time goes on and as freezer-locker space becomes more available, this method of providing for periods of scarcity in egg production will become more popular, Prof. Dearstyne said.

Many Veterans Drop Insurance

Paramore Urges Reinstatement Of Policies; Half Of Total Lapsed

Veterans who have failed to keep their National Service Life Insurance in force were urged today to take advantage of their present opportunity to reinstate it in a statement issued by Walter H. Paramore, executive secretary of the Whiteville Merchants association.

"It is alarming that so great a number of veterans have neglected to preserve this valuable protection," Mr. Paramore said. "It is important that local veterans get the facts about their G. I. insurance from the nearest Veterans Administration, county service officer or from any life insurance agent."

Among the 5,000 veterans in Columbus county, 50 per cent have allowed their insurance to lapse, according to Mr. Paramore. "This protection may mean the difference between financial independence or want for the veterans' wives and children. It will have a marked effect on the economic security of our community."

"If the veterans who lost this protection knew the facts, they would lose no time in getting it back. Regardless of how long their insurance has been lapsed, they can reinstate it, in most cases, without a physical examination if they apply on or before August 1st."
