

Norwood Brooks Buried Sunday
 Young Member of Prominent Brunswick Family Was Killed in Action in Fall of 1944.

Norwood graduated from the Shallotte high school in 1935. Afterwards he rounded out his education at Louisiana college and the University of North Carolina. He was employed by the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company at the time he was inducted into the service on September 3, 1943. He was sent overseas with the 15th Infantry division of the Seventh Army in February 1944. This division was cited several times for gallantry in action.

standing young men, the youngest son of the late George E. Brooks and Mrs. Brooks, was killed in action in Italy on November 5, 1944.

Surviving besides his mother are four sisters, Miss Mary E. Brooks and Mrs. John J. Furlong, Jr., of Wilmington; Misses Lula J. and Zella S. Brooks of Seaside; four brothers, James F. Brooks of Wilmington, George E., Joseph C., and John E. Brooks, all of Seaside.

Myrtle Beach Doctor Passes

Following an illness of two weeks, starting with a heart attack, Dr. William A. Rourk, beloved pioneer physician of Myrtle Beach, S. C., died at his home Tuesday of last week. He was a son of the late W. A. and Mrs. Rourk, of Shallotte, and resided in Brunswick county for many years.

Burial was held Wednesday afternoon in the Lakeside cemetery at Conway, S. C.

The active pallbearers were: Dr. N. C. Ridgell, H. V. Bellamy, G. C. Cox, F. M. Martin, Biscal Davis, and J. Ransome Williams. Those serving as honorary pallbearers were the officers of the Presbyterian Church and members of the Horry County Medical Association.

Dr. Rourk is survived by his wife, the former Mrs. Gertrude McDonnell; one son, James Rodman Rourk; his mother, Mrs. W. A. Rourk of Myrtle Beach and Shallotte; two sisters, Mrs. Robert F. Clark of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. William Swinson of Myrtle Beach; and one brother, Dr. Henderson Rourk, of Shallotte.

until discharged last fall. The pavilion has been the key to activities at the beach. Located at a central point, it has always had a thriving business during the summer and fall. Purchased two years ago by Mr. Garrell's son, who was killed in an automobile wreck soon after taking charge, it has been operated for the past two seasons without any personal supervision of the owner. Now having owner-operators, it should play a big part in the development of this rapidly growing beach.

Valedictorian of the class was Jimmie Cox; salutatorian was Otelia Simmons Carrier; the citizenship award went to Blanche Weeks; and the athletic award was given to Tommy Bowmer.

Gifts also were presented the mascots, Jean Gilbert and Freddie Burdette.

The final feature of the program was presentation of diplomas by James M. Harper, Jr.

On Sunday morning members of the graduating class and a large congregation of friends and relatives heard an impressive sermon delivered by the Rev. Jerry Newmold. Invocation and benediction was by the Rev. L. D. Hayman.

For both these programs the high school glee club, under the direction of Mrs. J. T. Denning, rendered special music.

Marshals for commencement exercises were Barbara Price, chief; Maxine Doshier, Ula Garner, Richard Brendle and George Stanley.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER BACKS
FORMER GOVERNOR
J. MELVILLE BROUGHTON
FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE

Editorial from the Wilmington (N. C.) Sunday Star-News

"LET THE PEOPLE CHOOSE"

The best of all indicators of what may be expected of a man seeking a great responsibility is his past record in a comparable position.

As the candidates go before the people of North Carolina in the current political campaign, the thought expressed most often about this or that one is in the form of a question—What has he done to prove that he is capable of the new role he seeks in public service?

And of all before those voters today, none has a better answer than J. Melville Broughton, North Carolina's war-time governor who is now a candidate for nomination to the United States Senate in the May 29 Democratic primary.

That answer is in the form of a record of progressive public service unsurpassed in North Carolina in recent years. Now is an appropriate time to review it briefly. As we do, twelve outstanding achievements highlight his administration as the state's Chief Executive from January 7, 1941 to January 4, 1945, one of the most critical periods in the state's modern life.

These accomplishments, in which every citizen benefited, are:

Enactment of teacher and state employees retirement law; Legislation adding 12th grade to the public school system; Nine month school law; State aid to public libraries; Reorganization of state hospitals and correctional institutions under consolidated boards; removal of sales tax from all food for home consumption; enlarged appropriations for agricultural experiment and research; notable expansion of the schools of dairying and agriculture and the textile and engineering schools at N. C. State College; establishment of the first State vocational school in the history of the state, being the textile school in Gaston County; inaugurated broad program of mineral research and development of mineral resources; organization of Civilian Defense program during the war, and launching of movement for broad medical care and hospital program and appointment of commission to recommend appropriate legislation, which recommendations were later enacted into law.

For an administration to have done so much for its state in a four-year period means that its leader was not only keenly aware of the varied and numerous needs of the people, but had the outstanding ability to do something about fulfilling them. It is most difficult to recall a North Carolinian better informed than Mr. Broughton on the state's people, their problems and, most important, their future destiny in one of the great commonwealths of the republic.

His return to the role of private citizen has not diminished his forceful interest in his state.

The past years have seen him using his fine talents and valuable time in behalf of expansion of industry, development of state ports, betterment of agriculture and numerous other concerted programs to improve all North Carolina.

His campaign, conducted with all the dignity befitting the office he seeks, is based on one theme—Let the people choose.

"The people of the state will determine whether or not my experience and service as Governor, legislator and in other public capacities qualify me to serve as their representative in the Senate of the United States," Mr. Broughton said in his original announcement. "My campaign will be addressed to the people. gubernatorial appointment, under the statute, has filled the temporary vacancy caused by death; but only the people by their votes can decide who will represent them in the Senate for the full term.

"If I am nominated and elected, as I confidently expect to be, I will owe no allegiance except to the people. To their service and to the national welfare I will dedicate all the energy and ability that I possess."

On the basis of his outstanding four-year record in the state's highest office, his continuous, intense interest in the state's whole welfare and his ability and determination to serve with distinction in the world's greatest parliamentary body, we believe the people of North Carolina will choose J. Melville Broughton as their next U. S. Senator.
