

PLANE ESCAPES
 He was standing beneath the car on the highway, and almost directly underneath the plane when it hit the line. The plane said that the wheels were caught, but that the moment contact was made, he said, the motor stopped and the plane fell over. The propeller was shattered and considerable damage resulted to the forward section of the plane, and required no medical attention.

The accident occurred on a peanut patch between L. E. Gore, a landing pilot, and home London Gore, who had completed a flight training course at the Scotland Flying Field.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS:
 We offer our congratulations to the Brunswick County Tobacco Growers for the fine crop they have produced. It was our good fortune to be of some assistance to many of you in providing you with the tools and materials you needed, when you need them.
 We are happy that high prices have prevailed during the early days of the market, and it is our hope that the money paid to our farmers may serve as a healthy and stabilizing influence in the economic life of our county.
