the fourth generation of one branch of the family of Mr. and Mrs. R. Will Davis.

Recently these three great grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. More were picked as the subjects for an illustrated story in the North Carolina Better Health magazine. In this story they will be portrayed as the typically healthy North Carolina coastal family.

The story goes all of the way from showing the normal everyday activities of the children to their parents, grand parents and great grandparents. This includes a group photograph of the four generations taken in the home of the children.

At Southport the inside fishing is also becoming increasingly good with many choice spots attracting fishermen. These are mostly in the creeks and bays between the town and Bald Head Island. The Point on Bald Head Island is ripe

G. C. Kilpatrick of Southport is of a five generation family. The same also holds true of the family of Mrs. J. J. Loughlin, Jr., of Southport. There are doubtless others.

OPEN FORUM

A column dedicated to opinions of the public. A mouthpiece for the views and observations of our friends and readers, for which we accept no responsibility. Contributions to this column must not exceed three hundred words.

Editor,
The State Port Pilot,
Southport, N. C.

Dear Sir:

I noticed in last week's issue of the paper that something new has been added; I'm referring to the column, "The Open Forum". I think it is one of the best ways of obtaining public opinion, critical and constructive.

Last week's column appeared to have been very much on the critical side; however, I was impressed with the fact that the editor, regardless of its critical nature, went ahead and printed it.

I think that it is about time someone said something complimentary about The State Port Pilot. I, for one, think that it is one of the best newspapers of its kind. Besides containing local and state wide news, it offers to the readers many interesting feature stories. The State Port Pilot is really a "hound" for news!

I would like to extend my congratulation to you folks for the splendid work is being done. I am sure that all of your subscribers feel the same way.

Sincerely yours,
Halstead Holden.
