

Chadbourn Man Delivers Sermon Before Truman

Rev. Tom Fryer, who graduated from Whiteville Schools, is honored by President's Visit

25,000 WELCOME CHIEF EXECUTIVE

New Bern Stopover Is Occasioned By Invitation At White House Last August

President Harry S. Truman, who will spend four more years in the White House as the result of his sweeping victory in Tuesday's general election, stopped off in New Bern Sunday to worship at First Baptist Church and was greeted by some 25,000 North Carolinians.

Rev. Tom Fryer, a native son of Chadbourn and a close friend of A. Elmo Powell, Jr., chairman of the Columbus County Board of Elections, had the honor of delivering the sermon which was heard by the Presidential party.

Fryer extended an invitation last August for the President to visit his church and was surprised when he learned that Mr. Truman placed New Bern on his itinerary. The President was en route to Key West, Florida.

At the service yesterday, Fryer spoke on the subject, "Facing Our World Of Today."

The New Bern clergyman was the son of Matt Fryer and was graduated from Whiteville High School. His mother taught in the local schools. He was a star football player on the local footpack.

He and Powell spent three years together in New York when Fryer was studying at Columbia University.

A plate and fork should always accompany layer cake when it is served with afternoon tea or coffee since it is hard to manage "out of hand."

16-Quart Strawberry Crates To Be Introduced On Marts In '49

Brunswick County strawberries may go out next year in 16-quart crates as well as the standard 24-quart size.

The privilege of using either type was authorized last week at a meeting of growers, buyers and manufacturers who discussed the matter at considerable length.

Several buyers spoke in favor of the 16-quart crate with the thought in mind that berries in the smaller container probably would reach Northern markets in better condition than in the 24-quart crate. It was also brought out that a number of smaller grocery stores would possibly buy the smaller number of quarts whereas they might fear too big a loss if they purchased the 24-quart size.

Joe Blont, president of the South Carolina Farm Bureau and a leading farmer of Horry County, expressed himself in favor of the change to the 16-quart crate on the grounds that growers would put better quality berries on the market. The group agreed that "quality sells the products."

Some of the manufacturers and farmers pointed out that a large number of 24-quart crates were already on the farms and in view of that fact, it was recommended that both sizes be allowed on the markets next year.

This will also give the growers dealers and manufacturers an opportunity to check the results before making any definite change-over. The manufacturers promised some 16-quart crates this season but it is optional with the grower as to whether they use the 16 or 24 size.

sure. Only a short distance away is Neil's Eddy, a Cape Fear river landing, and then wide acres of river lowlands.

Mr. Page told us this morning one of his most interesting hunting experiences. He was in the lowlands, he said, and it was getting late over in the afternoon, nearly time for turkeys to go to roost. This happened many years ago, and then one could shoot a turkey from the roost without violating any game law. So there was nothing wrong in his looking for a turkey at this late hour.

But he was getting pretty well out of hope finding one on this particular occasion, and was starting toward home, when suddenly he saw a whole drove of turkeys coming toward him. Cautiously he stopped and waited, for they were still too far away to shoot. And as he watched he happened to see another drove coming from another direction.

Both droves headed up on a little ridge about seventy-five yards in front of Mr. Page, and there they met. And what a meeting! Mr. Page said that it was a regular convention, in which each one had plenty to say. Such yelping he had never heard in all his hunting career.

There was no fighting; just plenty of yelping, with each turkey apparently standing on toes with heads lifted as high as possible. This greeting kept up for two or three minutes. Then all quitted down and one drove went east and the other went west. They separated for a distant of two or three hundred yards and then began flying, one or two at a time, up on their roosts.

A couple came too near Mr. Page, and were taken. The remainder lived to attend another convention.

Mr. Page enjoys hunting with a rifle, there seems to be more sportsmanship in it, at least for squirrel hunting. Because it takes a good eye and steady nerves to bag much game with a rifle. And one also gets the thrill of having to be more cautious, while stalking his prey.

On one afternoon hunt for turkeys Mr. Page had his rifle along and presently he located a drove of turkeys feeding along the side of a small slue, that was about as deep as an ordinary ditch. Since this slue was dry Mr. Page got in it and after much painstaking, he drew near enough for a shot.

Picking of the leader of the drove at the first shot, he decided to try for another, and then he discovered that his rifle had jammed. Turkeys, excited, were running and flopping in all directions. Some came so near Mr. Page he pulled a little .22 pistol from his pocket and killed one with a shot from it. Mr. Page also has the distinction of having killed four turkeys by pistol fire, thus far.
