Arrington Club Hostess

The club is anxious to see more cooperation in the beautification project which it is sponsoring. A drive was started last year and since then only 38 people have entered the contest.

Prizes of $150.00 have been offered and more people are urged to enter the contest, but to improve and clean up their property. If everyone will help, members think Southport will be a place of which to be proud. With so many natural resources it will take little to make it the most beautiful town on the coast.

Those wishing to enter the contest and complete for the prize money should contact Mrs. Anna Davis.

Hostess To Club

Farm Students See The President

The N. F. A. students of Brunswick County Training School visited the State Agricultural Fair in Raleigh on October 19th.

The opportunity afforded the local students a chance to see the president of the United States in person for the first time. The trip was made in cooperation with fifty veterans taking institutional-on-farm training under the direction of J. A. Francis, teacher of vocational agriculture; assisted by P. Dubar, H. F. Mebane and M. Mebane, special instructors for the local veterans Farmer Training program.

Quality Of Shrimp Keeps Price Up

Lewis J. Hardee, local seafood producer, stated Monday night that the general price for shrimp in 1948 has been 20 percent off from what it was in 1947.

This is believed to be due largely to a heavy production at all shrimp producing points and to a small extent to the drop in prices since the war.

Mr. Hardee quickly set things to rights by saying: "The drop in prices did not effect the Southport product, as the size taken here brought a premium that offset the drop in price." Local producers have been receiving as much per pound as they did in 1947.

A little inquiry revealed that the local boys knew an uncommon lot about the missing truck, and this led Leggett to swear out a warrant for their arrest on charges of theft of a motor vehicle and damage to property.

Today in Recorder's court David R. Williamson and Earl Gore, White youths, will face trial on these charges.

JANUARY 29 DATE

(Continued From Page One) than the required number of voters were presented to the board of county commissioners in the early fall. The commissioners in turn passed it on to the election board for action. Plans were made to hold the election this month, but it was found that there were legal obstacles to such an election being held within 60 days of a general election.

According to Mr. McKeithan, as the election could not be held before Christmas, it was felt by all concerned that late in January would be better than in the middle of the holidays. The registration books will open at the usual time preceding an election. The question to be answered is whether beer and wine shall be legally sold in Brunswick county.

OPEN SEASON ON

Everybody Works When

(Continued from page one) to take this progressive step which would give them the finest church building in the entire county; he had counseled with his board of deacons over financial problems; and he had preached forceful sermons on stewardship to keep his members active in their support of the program which had been undertaken. But the Rev. Mr. Baker was not content with a job as leader in spirit only. When he said "Let us work together" he really meant it and soon this became apparent.

There were piles of unsightly scrap iron rusing away on the waterfront, and there were wrecks of abandoned automobiles on the vacant lots. Also there was a market for scrap iron. The Baptist minister enlisted the aid of young boys in his church membership and set about the business of converting this scrap into cash. Already funds from this source have reached more than $2,500.00, and the scrap iron collection continues, usually with the preacher right there with old clothes on, working harder than anyone else.

Most of the labor in this drive was from the boys, and it occurred to the Rev. Mr. Baker that perhaps the girls in the congregation would like to help with the matter of raising money for the church. Thus was born the idea for the Southport Laundrette a new business which grossed $1,200.00 during the first five months of its existence and paid a neat profit to the church treasury.

In rambling about the county in search of scrap iron, discovery was made that not only was there a big discrepancy between the price paid for fresh eggs here in Southport and out in the county, but that there always is a shortage here. Soon the scrap collectors were handling county eggs as a profitable sideline.

Not all of the profits received from these sources were paid into the church building fund, because there is an active youth program being conducted in connection with the Baptist church in Southport, and this work had to go on. But as the Rev. Mr. Baker pointed out, "Every dollar which the boys and girls helped to turn into the church treasury, regardless of for what purpose, meant that other funds made available for the building program."

A large share of the work, as usual, fell upon the shoulders of the women of the church congregation, who throughout the year have served suppers, have held numerous cake and pie sales and have operated booths for the sale of refreshments at various public gatherings.

Early in the discussion of plans for the building program the fact came to light that an experienced contractor in disguise was a member of the congregation; so when work began G. C. Kilpatrick, Southport undertaker, was the man reading the blue prints. Throughout the building period he has been in charge of the work, and has managed to keep his own private business going without interference.

Best available estimates place the cost of the new church building at $50,000.00. There could be no finer tribute to the cooperative efforts of the entire membership of the Southport Baptist church than fact that the anticipated indebtedness for the completed job will be only $15,000.00.

Nobody who has been seen the Baptist at work, from the preacher down to the youngest kid who has helped haul scrap, has any doubt but that this indebtedness soon will be paid off.

In the South Baptist church, everybody works.
