Even Dirt Road Has Its Danger

Even dirt roads can claim their casualties when there is too much zig-zagging or forgetting to do same. Saturday night a car operated by William Ellis Gray on a dirt road east of Winabow zagged to much and zigged too little so that the center of the radiator collided with a large pine tree.

Gray, a colored man, was accompanied by Van Jenrette, also colored. Jenrette received severe lacerations about the chin and face and also a very painful knee injury. Despite the dirt road, the car, a 1941 model Ford, was doing around 40 miles per hour, according to State Highway Patrolman C. M. Cummings, who investigated the wreck.

Cummings says that the car was damaged at least $400.00 He arrested Gray and charged him with reckless driving.
