

CONSERVATION NOTES

Each row acts as a small terrace holding the soil and fertilizer in the field where the crops can use it. You no longer see topsoil washed to the lower side of the field after it rains. Stanley also planted kudzu on both sides of a ditch where terraces empty to keep it from washing.

was too sandy. He suggested I seed my pasture in a low wet field that I didn't think would grow anything. I tried it, Chadwick said. I followed his recommendations as well as I knew how, and this spring that clover beat anything I've ever seen growing. This pasture took the place of expensive protein-supplement feed for my hogs."

Charles Taylor, ex-service-man and farmer near Winnabow, this spring planted a 4-acre eroded sloping field to kudzu as part of the soil conservation plan that he worked out for his entire farm with the local Soil Conservation Service technician.

Kudzu will put this idle land to work for Mr. Taylor. It will supply valuable grazing for his livestock during summer and fall months when other grazing crops are at a standstill. And it will hold the soil in place while building it up for potential cropland in future years.

Harry Chadwick, ex-service-man and farmer of Shallotte, seeded an acre of ladino clover and tall fescue last fall.

"I had some well-drained land prepared when I applied to the District for assistance, but when the SCS man came to help me, he said the land I had in mind

CONDITION IMPROVES Col. Earl I. Brown, who has been a patient at Walter Reid Hospital for several weeks, is much improved and hopes to be able to return to his home in Southport soon.

BIRTHDAY ON FOURTH The birthdays of Roma Pigott and Joe Arnold of Southport fell on Monday of this week. Despite the fact of it being their birthday and the 4th both men went about their work as usual and without any celebrating.
