The students are gradually getting settled down to the thought of books and homework.

When Monday came the freshmen knew their way around as well as the seniors. After all, with a class of over 60 they couldn't get lost.

This year the primary grades gained one of our high school teachers. She is Mrs. Frances Stone who is teaching first grade.

The high school students hated to see you go, Mrs. Stone, but we know the primary grades are delighted to have you as one of their teachers.

Monday morning the lunchroom opened with the same helpers as last year. We had a delicious lunch consisting of hamburger as the main dish. That's enough about food since it makes us hungry.

If you see the Shallotte students carrying a cream and purple book around with 49. Jolly Roger on the cover, don't be surprised. It's an annual. They came late and we didn't get them until summer, but they were worth waiting for.

The library has some new books this year and they are being checked like wildfire. The regular amount of time to keep them out has been cut down in some cases because they are being read overnight.

We would like to welcome Vivian McKeithan from Waccamaw to the high school student-body.

Seen on the campus: Mr. Carmichael's and Mr. Reese's history students trying to find out about their ancestors. Mrs. McKeithan's French 11 students recalling last year's teaching while the French I students think its hopeless. Sammie Boyd and Lois Pigott carrying a box of power around. (It was very popular in French I Friday). Mack Gray with a black eye from football practice. The agriculture II boys solving one of Mr. Mintz's problems. Selene Register dropping some sort of ring on the floor that sounds like a bell when it hits. Audrey Milligan, Billie Leonard and Ruth Galloway pondering over geometry. Elmer Dance making wise cracks. Ovida Mae Hewett starting school Friday. Miss Nevill's Typing 1 students wondering if they will ever learn to type. Ida and Marion Galloway, Betty Lou Gray, Jackie Leonard, Betty Hewett and Gladys Hewett especially liking physical education where basketball is concerned. This also goes for Carolyn Holden and Norma Lancaster.

We'll be back next week with more gossip, so don't forget to look for us.
