New Bricklaying Machine Invented

Small Device Estimated To Effect Saving Of $100 Million Per Year In Building Cost
A bricklaying machine that steps up the speed of building 3 to 4 times its usual rate has been invented by two Montgomery, Ala. World War II veterans and will be marketed to the building trade immediately. A small-job size, for home and farm use, will be made available through state agencies. The device does not automatically lay bricks but with a frame that insures true walls, guides that direct quick accurate placing, built-in spirit levels and a large size scoop that beds 8 bricks with one scoopful, the process of laying proceeds about as fast as a man can pick up bricks and lay them down. The machine is said to save up to 36 cents a square foot in wall construction costs and will bring brick building definitely within the low-price field. Acceptance of the device by the building industry is expected to effect a saving of $100,000,000 a year.

The new bricklayer was developed primarily to provide a means to lower the cost of GI housing and to provide a cheaper and better form of construction to replace the jerry-built houses that poor materials and high costs have imposed. Repeated tests have proved that by using the machine 2,000 to 3,000 bricks can be laid in an 8-hour day, and the simplicity of the operation makes it practical to build many types of buildings without the aid of skilled labor.
According to the inventors, Paul Sommers and John Hodgson, this new speed and saving will bring an immediate increase in the number of brick homes which will benefit the entire industry and provide jobs for thousands of masons. The machine, which is light in weight and inexpensive, is of special interest to the farmer and home owner. With it, the farmer can build his own silos, outbuildings, even his own home with an important saving. The home owner can build his own garage, walks, walls, foundations, partitions and additions.

CATHOLIC INFORMATION

Modern minds shall pass away, but...

Nineteen hundred years ago a Roman orator was publicly scoffing at the teachings of the followers of Christ; and as he was to a priest, praying for their souls in Purgatory, and adhering to all the Catholic beliefs that we adhere to today—that the early Christians believed and taught in the first Christian century.
And while they are preaching, Catholics of the 39th century will be assisting at Mass, confessing to a priest, praying for their dead in Purgatory, and adhering to all the Catholic beliefs that we adhere to today—that the early Christians believed and taught in the first Christian century.
For every Catholic knows that neither time nor man can alter a whit the truths which God revealed to man and about which Christ Himself said: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away" (Mark 13:31).
Every year on the second day of November (All Souls' Day) every Catholic priest throughout the world offers up Mass for all departed souls. During the entire month of November, the Church exhorts every Catholic in the world to remember in his prayers the dead of all ages and all peoples. So you see, dear Neighbor, we Catholics pray regularly for your departed ones and some day we shall be praying for the welfare of your own immortal soul.
If it's anything Catholic, ask a Catholic!
