will take on the East Arcadia boys and girls here Thursday night at 7:30. The boys game promises to be interesting but East Arcadia, in previous encounters, has usually managed to put out a superior girls team. An active and noisy cheering section usually makes things interesting, regardless of the playing.

toughest weather. She is a good towboat, good fire boat and stands radio guard day and night over all transient shipping, as well as over the extensive commercial fishing in this area.

So many are the needs for this boat that local commercial fishermen and other boatmen say that when she is called away for even a short period, as in the present instance, another boat should be sent here to take over the watch during her absence. Weather now is unpredictable and with fishing being done at a distance offshore and with the great amount of waterway and ocean travel now proceeding a short distance off the coast, local folks are disturbed that the boat is now absent for even ten days.

County PMA Committeemen chairman, "because we do not have the names of most tenants and sharecroppers in Brunswick county, and are therefore not able to mail information and notices about the referendum to them directly."

The chairman explains that although community referendum committees will use registers of eligible voters as a guide to voting eligibility, any person whose name does not appear on the register will be allowed to cast a ballot if he believes he is eligible to vote. Such ballots may be "challenged," however, if the person is unable to prove that he had an interest in a cotton crop in 1948, and eligibility will be determined by the County PMA Committee before such ballots are counted.

noted for the extremely fine service it gives its subscribers. At least, that has always been the case at Southport. Dr. R. H. Holden of Holden Beach and Shallotte, stated this week that if there was any possibility of getting the Bell Company to Holden Beach in a reasonable length of time, it would be best for the beach to wait for such an opportunity. However, they can hardly afford to pass up any real chance without assurance.

miles of especially nice beaches. It is a place that could be filled with attractive year-round homes. It is believed that it would fill with such people and in addition would draw thousands of visitors annually if a start of some sort was only made. Once this was done, ways and means would quickly be provided to make the place more accessible.

With the new paved River Road from Wilmington to Southport and the rapid development of Long Beach, Caswell Beach and Fort Caswell, a ferry running Southport to Bald Head, via Fort Caswell, should be a profitable business.

FISHING CYCLE MAY BE
Company remained in operation at Southport. It, too, would probably have been abandoned if fish meal had not become an important product, largely replacing the oil in value.

With fish meal as a product the factory was able to weather things, despite the main fish producing centers developing further east. Fishing in the spring and summer became important, despite the fact that there was little or no oil. For a number of years there was still a small run of fish with oil, coming as far down the coast as Southport and then fading out into the ocean.

This finally ceased and for a number of years the oil production at Southport was low, practically all of it being taken from fish caught in the Beaufort area in November.

During the past several years, the fishermen say, the schools of roe menhaden, forming all of the way to Delaware, have become increasingly shy and expert at dodging the fishermen and their nets. Instead of traveling on the surface of the water or near it where they could easily be spotted, the roe menhaden have been ranging wide and deep. They travel further offshore or else go deep, when they cannot easily be seen. As a result they get through the blockades. At least many of them do. They get down the coast and Southport is becoming a spawning ground and is getting a yearly increase in its local summer fish.
