The Boys at the Jamestown Exposition

Third Article.

Dear Friend:—The next building we write about is the Smithsonian Institute (one of the government buildings). The exhibits in this building will recall your lessons in the first part of the U. S. History. In the center is a pool of water on which floats a boat and two Indian canoes. Was figures to represent John Smith and his crew are in the large boat and Indians, in the canoes. This is a trading scene. There is one Indian in the crowd who is very generous with his products, and presents an English man with a plate of persimmons just turning red. The Englishman has bitten one and my soul face as he wears. The rest of this little band are bent double with laughter. Here also, are small ships patterned after the Good Speed, Susan Constant, the Mayflower and several others that were in us at the same time. They are queer looking boats sure.

POST OFFICE BUILDING. There are many interesting things to be seen in the P. O. Building. Here are shown all the methods of carrying mail in the United States and its possessions from the time of Washington to the present. We saw the first coach that carried mail into Montana. Just outside the door is a U. S. mail car. Of course they are a common thing. People who are near the railroad see one every day, but few have the opportunity of seeing inside of one; so we found this one interesting to us. Somewhere we saw a very large ox, with horns that looked to be one yard long, hitched to an odd looking cart. It came from Mexico and was a great curiosity to us.

MANUFACTURER'S BUILDING. In the Manufacturers' Building we saw the Cradlock Shoe Company's department, where they were busy making shoes. This is a very large building, but was not finished and besides we were not so interested. We might say that High Point had some very handsome furniture here. The Transportation Building and Liberal Arts Building were not completed. The Mexico Building is very interesting. The Negro Building is a very pretty one, but if you see it you will have to hunt it up. It is an out of the way place behind the Insulin Building. The Larkin Soap Company's building is especially interesting to ladies, and so is the building that has so many things to eat in it. We have forgotten the name, but if you go to the Exposition please you will find it. In the course of it the He No Tea Company has for its booth a huge tea kettle. Visitors are invited into this kettle to rest. Did we go in? Of course and found it quite comfortable.

ON THE WAR PATH. Now for the War Path. This is named from three shows on it, the "Battle of Manassas," "Battle of Gettysburg," and "Battle of the Merrimac and Monitor." We would like to tell you of the "Battle of the Merrimac and Monitor," but don't know how to begin. Anyway it seemed to be real boats fighting on real water. One of the Union boats was sunk, another set on fire and burnt up, then the Merrimac went back up the river, night came, the moon rose and was soon covered by a great black cloud; then we could hear the thunder, see it lightning, and we never saw it rain harder or faster. The sun rose in the morning was just as natural as any you ever saw. As you know the Monitor—called a cheese box on a raft—attempted to disable the Merrimac. I'll tell you they did some shooting, but neither could harm the other; so the great battle ended. All this, and more too took place in a small round house and when the show was over we were nearly stifled with powder smoke and felt as though we had seen the real battle which was fought over forty years ago.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS. We saw Eli Smith and his dogs who came from Alaska to Washington, D. C. in 15 months. We took a trip to Alaska and saw how a gold mine is run. We saw them panning out gold. From what we saw, a miner's life must be a hard one. Another interesting show is "Trained Wild animals and the Jungle." We only went to those that sister thought kids like we would enjoy, as she was not out for her pleasure but for ours. She only left us once, and that was to examine fancy work, you might know.

The War Path is most interesting about 9 o'clock at night. So many of the odd creatures are out on parade. A soldier's parade is given at 5 o'clock every evening. The Government buildings and State buildings are closed at 5 o'clock.

Over on the back side of the Exposition grounds are several locomotives that look like mountains compared with the engines on the Asheboro Railroad.

The Exposition grounds are prettiest at night. It is worth the trip to see them lighted up. They border on the water and there is room on the beach for everybody. The war ships, lighted up, present a beautiful picture. Of course we can not tell about everything we saw, and if we say anything about Norfolk and Ocean View we must leave the Exposition.

ON THE BEACH. Ocean View is a summer resort on a sandy bank that borders the Atlantic. The occupation of the people here is "enjoying life while they can." If you want to enjoy surf bathing to the fullest extent, take your own bathing suit. If you have not got it, get it before you go to Ocean View.

We went from Ocean View to Norfolk on the trolley cars and got a view of the surrounding country. The cabbage patches, we saw, were as much a curiosity as anything we saw at the Exposition, because they were so large. Norfolk is a low, dirty looking place, we mean the business part. Some of the residence portion is very pretty and has some very handsome houses.

This winds up night-seeing here. We took the boat at Pine Beach Pier and left for Richmond. We were quite ready to go too, for we had put in every bit of time. When we stopped to rest by the way side our eyes were feasting.

If you go to Jamestown, which we hope you will, you must be sure to go by Richmond, Va., if you have never been there. It costs no more and so are sure you want to see Richmond almost as much as Jamestown.

Before closing we would like to correct an error in our last letter. A sentence was left out and made an awkward meaning. It is in the Hollywood Cemetery that is so hilly and contains the vaults. The Observatory is on the City Hall and not the City Hotel.

Mr. H. we hope you have not been disappointed in our letter. We've done our best. Come to see us and we will show you our souvenir books and cards.

Thanking the Courier for space in the paper, we are Yours respectfully, Colou and Otis Osborne, Worthville, N. C.
