There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and cleanses the system. To keep onions over winter, put them in a dry location, such as a barn loft, and spread them on the floor or shelves in thin layers. If they should happen to freeze it will not damage them, provided they are not disturbed when frozen. They should be covered with sheets of paper in order to assist in preventing sudden thawing, but usually if the layers of onions are not too thick, and the location is dry, they will keep without difficulty.

NEW PAPER FOR LONDON.

American Style and Reporters to Be Used in Educating Englishmen.

R. S. Barrett, proprietor of the Daily Record of the City of Mexico, upon landing at New York the other morning from the steamship Finland said that he had decided to establish in London a newspaper "along the lines of the up to date American dailies." He would import for his purpose, he explained, reporters trained in American journalism. Mr. Barrett is an American. He has conducted his Mexican newspaper for some years, says the New York Post.

"I do not think that the English reading public is as yet ready to receive the kind of paper I expect to publish," he said. "Their newspapers are heavy and ponderous, and I am of the opinion that it will take a long period to educate them to like the American style of journalism. My paper, therefore, will depend at first upon the patronage of summer tourists, who flock to London in large numbers in the summer and will be glad to find there a newspaper of the style to which they are accustomed. In the winter American tourists come to Mexico. Until I am well started in London I shall divide my time between the two cities, depending in both places for the patronage of the American visitor."

English papers were described by Mr. Barrett as far behind ours in their manner of handling news and advertising.

"They have not as yet adopted the telephone as a means of transmitting news," he said, "and in other respects their methods are crude. The telephone systems of English cities, by the way, are in about the same stage of development that those of the United States had reached ten or fifteen years ago. The service is slow and poor."

"The English reporter takes his time about getting a story and must go all the way to his office to write it. He knows nothing of the rapid fire editions such as are to be found in New York and other large American cities."

AUTOS ON KANSAS FARMS.

Farmers' Wives Learning to Use the Machines.

The motor is taking the place of the horse and buggy in the country, according to a Salina (Kan.) correspondent of the Kansas City Star. The farmers' wives are learning to use the machine. It is not an uncommon thing to see a motor car loaded with garden truck driven by a woman on its way to market.

A few mornings ago a snapshot was taken in Salina of two runabouts from the country that had been used to market the products of the farm. Mrs. Frank Brendle brought to market a load of garden truck. When she reached the market she found her neighbor, Mrs. H. L. Center, there with a runabout load of chickens and eggs and accompanied by her little girl. Mrs. Brendle says she uses her machine for many things. She runs about over the country by herself, visits her neighbors and looks after the several Brendle farms.

"I use my machine for everything about the farm," said Mrs. Center. "I go to the pasture in it and bring up the cows. I visit my neighbors, and I come to town in it."

Mrs. Center says she has one cow that does not drive well. She overcomes this difficulty by putting a rope about the animal's horns and tying her to the back end of the motor car.

There was a time when the motor car agent spent his time with the country merchant, the banker and the professional man. The agent spends almost as much time with the farmer now as he does with the townsman. Fifteen or twenty machines are owned in Salina county by farmers.

KISSES FOR YACHTSMAN.

Girls Embraced Winner of Boat Race When He Disembarked.

"Oh, you dear man, you won!" ecstatically cried a young woman on the boat of the Norwalk (Conn.) Yacht club the other afternoon, says a special dispatch to the New York World. "You won! The Sheveril won! Take that!" "smack—kiss—'Take that'—kiss—'Oh, you dear, good skipper!'"

That was not all of the red lipped reward that met Dr. Walter T. Stromeier of New York the other day at South Norwalk. A dozen girls embraced him when he landed from his boat and in a youthful frenzy, animated by rivalry, clucked their arms around him, and some kissed him.

Please understand that Hickey Bluff and Bell Island are rival but undivided sections of a happy New York summer colony at South Norwalk, and the crack boat race of each season were watched in a race. The Sheveril represented Hickey Bluff, and it was her defeat of the crack crew of Bell Island that gained for Stromeier sweet reward.

Fishing With Electric Light.

Rud Ascholtz of Elizabethtown, Ky., who is one of the best fishermen in that section or any other section, is fixing to rig up all the Elizabethtown spots who use the reel and line thereabouts. He has a new contrivance which he thinks is sure to catch them, says the Elizabethtown News. A small wire runs through the eyelets on the pole down the line to just below the hook, where a small electric light is attached. The wire is connected to the bank with a small portable battery. When the line is dropped into the water the light is turned on and attracts all the fish for fifty yards around. Of course the first one to see the whirling glow takes the cork under, and the fish is landed. Everybody is waiting close to hear from Rud when he goes fishing.

BE CHEERFUL.

Sunshine Adds to Your Happiness and Helps Others.

Perhaps there are few of the busy men of affairs who realize that smiles, good nature and a sense of humor are actual business as well as moral and mental assets. Laughter is like sunshine, and drives away clouds and mists of doubt quite as surely. It not only helps to make the day more cheerful, but it makes success more possible. If the man who has many and serious cares upon him, couple with responsibilities, would get up in the morning determined to look for some gleam of happiness during the day, he would be amazed to find how much more easily the appointments and interviews, which had seemed so difficult, passed off. Go down to the office with the determination to make the best of every moment. If there is a tangle to be straightened out, go at it with an unruffled brow and a belief that it is coming your way. Pass through the employees' department with a smile and a nod. It is strange to observe how the faces brighten and the work goes forward with a new zest when it is known that "The old man is in a good humor this morning." More than that, the people who are in care of the affairs as underlings are quick to note the sleepless eye, the pallid cheek and the careworn face. It creates an element of unrest among them. Their work lags, their courage decreases and they feel that something is wrong. This means to them that their daily bread is menaced. They will not work as keenly for the interests of the man who forgets that they are as keenly sensitive to hope as the flowers are to sunlight. Keep the atmosphere of good cheer and helpfulness throughout your office, and then watch with what regularity your bookkeeper gets out the accounts and how swiftly and correctly the day's allotment of work is done.—Wall Street Daily News.
