shore the cliffi and beach were black with specta tors. The larges of the two warships was the great British frigate Scrapis, commanded by Captain Pearson and carrying forty four tune. The smaller of the two vessels was the Bonhomme Richard, a ramshockle old bulk from whose masthead hung the American flag. For hours the two craft had exchanged close quarters breadsides. The Bonhomme Richard was battered almost to pieces. She was in flames, and many of her small armshement of old guns were burst or silenced. The Scrapis was still in excellent condition and seemed to have her weaker for wholly at her mercy A shot carried away the American vessels flag. Observing the condition and seemed to have her weaker for wholly at her mercy A shot carried away the American vessels flag. Observing the condition and seemed to have her weaker for wholly at her mercy A shot carried away the American vessels flag. A shot carried away the American ves-sel's flag. Observing this, Captain Pearson shouted: "Have you struck your colors?" From out that inferne of flery death on the Yankee ship's quarterdeck came back the American commander's sneering retort:

"Struck? I have not yet begun to fight!

fight? The speaker was a swarthy little man, dressed foppishly, as though for a court ball. He was John Paul Jones, sallor of fortune. Eyen as Jones bellowed this defined at his strong for sailor of fertune. Even as Jones belowed this definace at his strong foethe Bothonne Richard's chief gunner rushed forward crying:

"For God's sake, surrender, sir! Our ship is shiking?"

Jones seized by the muscle a pistol he had just fired at the enemy and burling the empty weapon at the timorous gunner, broke the coward's skull. Then, through flame, smoke and beer ear splitting rour of artillery, the sequal battle waged on.

The little, foppishly dressed man who commanded the Bonhomme Richard was the son of a poor Scotch gardener. His real name was John Paul. But, couling to America as a mere lad, be had added the cognomen Jones and is thus known to history as Paul Jones. He was perhaps the most unjustly treated here of the war.

Paul Jones ravaged England's coasts, making his name a terrof from shore to shore and teaching Great Britain a wholesome respect for the revolting colonies. He captured or sank the English merchant ships, fought and conquered ber frigates and by consummate skill) avoided being hemmed in or captured. England began to see what the Revolutionary war meant. Jones was denounced as a pirate by the British government and a price set on his head.

the British government and a price set on his head.

Not content with the damage he had done. Jones planned for larger depredations. Sailing to France, where, in 1778, he had already bullied a Frouch admiral into recognizing officially the United States by Bring a salest to Old Glory, the first foreign sainte ever accorded to our flag, he personated Bengamin Franklin to help him raise a flect to sweep the British coasts. The best Jones could do was to raise, a broken down aggregation of these secondhaud ships, led by his flagebing Bonhomme Siehhard. With those he bore down on England, where, in late September, he feld in with a facet of merchantmen convoyed by the mighty Serapis and her consort, the Countess of Scarborough. Sending his amalier ships, the Palias and the Alkance, to attack the Countess of Scarborough. attack the Countess of Scarborough. Jones made for the Serapis.

Jones made for the Serapis.

After three hours of fearful carnage the Bonhomse Richard was a biszing wreck. Yet her fearless little commander fought on. The Palias was busy with the other British ships, which later she sank. The Alliance, under one Captain Landais, who hated Jenes, turned traitor at the crisical moment and began bombsed.

The Zebra, or

Honey Finding Bird.

One of the most sugacious birds is certainly the bee cuckoo, or moroe, a little bird very like the sparrow. It is found in various parts of Africa where wild bees abound, and, being unable to beip itself to the honey which is its favorite food, it resorts to human aid. Having discovered a swarm of bees, it files to the nearest habitation and attracts by its cries of "cherr, cherr, cherr," the attention of some of the natives. It then files off in the direction of the nest, uttering its ary and waiting for its followers to overtake it. Should they be tardy it seturns to meet them and seems trying to urge them on to greater speed, the natives suswering with a low whistie. Arrived at its destination, it is silent, waiting patiently on the bough of a neighboring tree while its human friends dig out the nest a good share crew be swarmed over the side of the Serapis on to her deck. As he did so the Bonhomme Richard sank. The Serapis was by this time ablaze, and Jones' wild oursel carried all before it. Captain Pearson surregdered.

"Sir," said the little conqueror as Searson gradgingly handed over his sword, "you have fought like a bero."

Jones, in spite of his spiendid victory, nover received another command from the ungraceful American congress, but was allowed to live and die in poverty and neglect.
