TRINITY SCHOOL FAIR.

A Great Success—Eventless Speeches—List of Winners
Trinity School Fair, which opened Thursday night, November 21st and closed Saturday morning, the 23rd, was pronounced by those who attended it a success. This was the first time in the history of the Public High Schools of our State where a high school has undertaken the arduous task of conducting under its supervision a school fair that included all the territory from which the high school gets its students. It was our intention to have every public school in our territory attend the fair. A strenuous effort was made on the part of the management to enlist the co-operation of every teacher in our territory in this cause and through them the patrons of their respective schools. While the people did not respond as readily as we had hoped, still there was enough response to satisfy the management that the project was practical and that our effort had not been in vain. The attendance was cut short on account of other conflicting operations, still our crowds were large and enthusiastic. It is estimated that about 3,000 people were in attendance. The success of it was such that we expect to make it a permanent institution.

The history of this fair is very brief. Last winter a few of our citizens and the management of Trinity High School got together and discussed the project. As a democratic institution, we believe that the high school should serve the interests of the people for whom it was established and for whom it is maintained. We, therefore, projected the idea that a fair which would include all the schools in our territory would reach the masses. The success of our undertaking convinces us that the school may be made a community center. We saw, also, when we planned that it might be the beginning of the implantation of a spirit among our people to establish in connection with the high school a county farm life school. We believe that this was done to ascertain extent and we hope that the question will be further agitated. What we saw her during the fair was a revelation to us and makes us believe that the era of the new education is about to burst upon us.

Our program of speakers was complete. A stronger body of men cannot be found in the State than that we secured. Four departments of our State's work were represented—the educational in the person of Prof. N. W. Walker, State high school inspector, and Dr. J. Y. Joyner, superintendent of public instruction; the State board of health in the person of Dr. W. S. Rankin, secretary of that department; the department of agriculture by Maj. W. A. Graham, who is commissioner of agriculture; and the North Carolina geologic survey by Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, State geologist.

Mr. Walker opened the fair Thursday night with an address on the high school. He showed the coordinated relationship between school and community and pointed out the fact that the life of a community may be interpreted by the character of its schools. He defined the place of the public high school in society and showed the benefits derived from the modern high school. He brought the high school and community together on common grounds and gave in outline what he thought the modern high school should do. His address was pronounced the most masterful ever heard in this community on the subject.

Friday morning Dr. Joyner spoke to a filled auditorium of patrons and school children. His address was along the same general lines as that of Mr. Walker with the exception that Dr. Joyner applied his more directly to the public rural school. He emphatically declared that a school supported and maintained by the citizenship of a community had no right to exist unless it returned to the community the needs of the community and served fully those who maintained it.

He showed further how the school may be made the center of community activities and declared that it must do this because 90 per cent of children will never get any more education than that offered by the public school. He spoke of the startling drain of the good citizenship from country to town and pointed out the danger of this to our civilization. He declared that this must be stopped by means of advancing ideals through our school system that will hold our future citizenship in the country. He closed with an appeal to the citizenship to work for the establishment of a County Farm Life School for Randolph county. His address was eloquent, strong and masterful as his always are.

Dr. Rankin spoke Friday morning, following Dr. Joyner. He gave some startling statistics in regard to the high death rate in North Carolina, showing the causes for it. He advocated the passage of a law by the next General Assembly that would require every birth and every death to be registered. He appealed to the good citizenship to cooperate in the dissemination of good health, to restore consciousness by finding out the exact health conditions of the community, and by employing a health officer. His address opened the eyes of the people on the question of public health.

Friday night Maj. Graham spoke to the people on agriculture. He showed what the department was doing for agriculture in this state and expressed himself as being greatly pleased with the progress of the department. He produced statistics as far back as 1860 and showed that in many respects the state is not producing as much now per inhabitant as it did then. Furthermore he pointed out the utter folly of trying to make any one crop "king". He showed that on account of this policy the agricultural production of the State have never come to the possibilities. His address was a mixture of practical common sense and humor. It made a decided impression on the people.

More Than 800,000 on Government Pension Roll.
Washington Dispatch.
There are now on the government's pension roll 638,800 soldiers and sailors, 321,923 dependents and widows and 363 army nurses, according to the annual report of the pension bureau. These include 497,263 survivors of the civil war and 233 widows of the war of 1812. To provide for all of them this year, $151,558,141 has been appropriated, a decrease of $3,276,098 from last year.

It is estimated that there were 3,213,365 individuals in the military and naval service of the United States during the civil war, and that upward of 75 per cent of them are now dead. The report predicts that the abolition of the pension agencies effective January 31, 1913, and the payment of all pensions direct from the pension bureau will result in a more efficient and economical duplication of work and saving expenses.

The total number of pensioners under general pension laws is 838,210, their pensions aggregating $144,973,569, and under special acts of congress, 22,084, aggregating $6,584,572 annually.

From the foundation of the government to June 30 last the United States paid $4,283,368,164 in pensions to soldiers, sailors and marines, their widows, minor children and dependent relatives on account of military and naval service in the various wars and in regular service.

Ends Hunt for Rich Girl.
Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach-bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all owing to the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizziness she promotes. Everywhere they are women's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c. at Asheboro DRUG CO.

How to Get rid of It.
At about this time of year the barn and the dwelling house as well often become infested with rats and mice, and the problem of how to get rid of them is necessarily made of importance to the farmer and the householder.
The best way to get rid of them is to use traps and the two means of getting rid of these pests. In preparation for the traps they should not be handled with bare hands but with gloves or a cloth to avoid the warning human odor. It is better to bait them with cheese and place them near the openings where the mice or rats enter the room. The box traps suit very well for mice.
There is some danger, especially to children, in using such strong poison as strychnine. Another fault is that the animal is killed too quickly thus dying in the house and causing a stench. Carbonate of barium is a good poison in that it usually delays death until the animal can get outside in search of water. The most common method for preparing this is to mix one part of barytes and six parts of corn meal with enough water to form a dough. This dough may then be placed where the rat or mouse can get it easily.
