RAISING COWPEAS FOR SEED.

When Rightly Handled, Cowpeas May Be Made a Very Profitable Crop.

Those who have waited this late to buy their cowpea seed will be surprised to find that the price is still soaring to heights not touched before. At this time it is difficult to tell just where they are going to stop. I have seen them quoted as high as $3.50 per bushel by some of the seed houses. I am fearful lest the high price, and the scarcity of the seed will cut down the acreage to a considerable extent this year. It is sad to see any leguminous crop cut in acreage, and our farmers every year should increase rather than cut down the acreage of these crops. It is a good sign to ride through the country and see great fields of cowpeas, soy beans and various clovers.

It is unfortunate that the supply of cowpea seed is so limited. When we get into a trouble one time, the right thing is to try to avoid it the next time. Farmers who are now experiencing these high prices should jump into this game of growing cowpeas for seed. Grow as many seed as you will need on your own farm, and just a few bushels to sell to the other fellow who does not take heed.

Too many of us have an idea that there is some great secret in growing cowpeas for seed, and that they hay or to plow under as a green manure crop. One reason for this is can grow them for nothing save the fact that so many sow peas so late, and always sow them broadcast, that they do not make very much, but vines and do not have time to mature the peas.

I am convinced that cowpea seed can be grown on many farms at a greater profit than can be made out of many of the other crops that are grown as a money crop. Three years ago in demonstrations in Hamilton county, Tennessee, more than one of the boys in the Cowpea Clubs grew as much as 32 bushels of cowpeas per acre. If we can always count on as much as $1.50 per bushel at harvest we will have $30 per acre. The vines make good hay, even after the peas have been gathered. At the same time you are growing a crop on the land that is greatly increasing the nitrogen content of the soil, and making it more fertile. We believe it is time that more of our farmers in every section should grow a few acres of cowpeas, and grow them for seed.

The trouble in most sections is the fact that there is no huller. We have our binders for wheat, mowers for hay crops, manure spreaders to handle our manure, and it is right that we should have these implements; but let's get together. Several of us, and get a cowpea thrasher in the neighborhood.

The best method of growing peas for seed is not to sow them broadcast, but to seed them in rows and cultivate. Have the land in good condition as a seed bed. It should not be too highly fertilized with a nitrogenous fertilizer, as this will cause too great growth of vines at a loss of pods. Plant the peas in rows about 20 to 24 ins. apart and cultivate three or four times with a light harrow or weeder. The planting should be done from April 20 to May 20, depending on the season and the climate. Get them planted as soon as danger of frost is over and the soil has warmed up to a considerable extent.

A good plan to be followed out in planting is to use a corn planter which is usually set for rows 42 inches. Use the cowpea plates and put an extra row in between each time, which will put the rows 21

Chickens and Gardens.

Moore County News.
 We hear much complaint in Sanford by citizens who are imposed upon by their neighbors who permit their chickens to run on their premises and gardens. According to law people have no right to permit their chickens to run at large and annoy their neighbors. It will soon be gardening time. A half dozen chickens can scratch up the seed of a whole garden in a few hours. Keep on good terms with your neighbors by keeping your chickens up. He has rights that should be respected as well as you.—Sanford Express.

So Carriage is not the only place infested by the trespassing chicken. What the Express says of the Sanford offender will apply to the Carriage offender. Let's every one keep up his chickens and keep down bad feelings with his neighbors.

ANOTHER HEALTH TALK.

Tillman Gives a Second Lecture to Senators and Lays Down Rules. (Washington Dispatch to The New York Sun.)

Senator Ben Tillman gave the Senate another lecture today on the necessity of conserving the health of Senators. It was an unusual performance and Senators sat by and smiled while Mr. Tillman told them he had celebrated his 66th birthday; that he had kept himself alive at least four years after his obituary had been written and was rapidly restoring his health by a system of physical culture exercises mornings and evenings in bed.

"I notice some of my colleagues smiling, and I say to you that I will bury some of you yet," said Mr. Tillman.

The Senator invited his colleagues to visit him at his office and learn his system of rules for physical exercises. He exhibited a magazine which is devoted to physical culture containing an article by himself illustrated with figures showing the various forms of exercise.

Mr. Tillman never drinks intoxicants and is the author of the South Carolina dispensary law. He advised his colleagues to drink water heated to a temperature of 160 degrees.

"I drink at least three quarts a day. I take it shortly after eating and find that it aids digestion.

"The four things which I believe have contributed most to my restoration to health are:

- "First—A careful diet.
- "Second—Deep breathing.
- "Third—Physical culture exercises.

"Fourth—Drinking hot water. "Without the physical culture I would now be tortured with rheumatism and perhaps bedridden. I have literally kicked the rheumatism out of the body."

Senator Tillman's method of exercise is to lie upon his back and as he describes it: "Kick the headboard of the bed."

The Senator sent to the desk and had read by the clerk of the Senate his rules for exercise, among them the following:

"Before rising in the morning remove the pillows from under the head and lie flat on the back. Draw deep breaths and begin by raising the legs and kicking out one foot 15 times, then inhale; repeat the operation with the other foot, then repeat the performance with both feet. Inhale to the limit after each movement."

The Senator's formula provides for waving the heels in the air 20 times, lifting the feet alternately and finally both together over the head and then kicking out "as though you were kicking off a vicious dog."

There are other exercises, such as lifting the body, the whole performance to be followed with a tepid bath—a cold shower and a brisk rubdown, followed by dumb-bell exercises.

American Engineer for Nile Dam.
 An American has been chosen as consulting engineer for the Egyptian government, for the building of a new dam across the Nile.

Hugh L. Cooper built the great Keokuk power dam across the Mississippi. That is considered one of the finest works of its kind in the world. As the Nile presents a like problem, Mr. Cooper seemed to be the man to handle it.

That is how one job well done opens the way for another.

Working Dream Mine.

Planning his faith to a dream, C. Olsen, a Spokane, Wash., contractor, is devoting money and time to the development of a gold mining claim near Nelson, Brit. Columbia.

John J. Nelson, mayor of Nelson, came to Spokane this week bearing news of this unique mining venture. Several years ago, he says, Olsen dreamed that he was opening a mine. He was shoveling our ore rich in the precious yellow metal. Of course he awoke disappointed, but with details of the physical surroundings of his dream mine firmly stamped in his memory.

A year later Olsen went to British Columbia to inspect some timber. Near Nelson he was surprised to find a spot which coincided as to hills, trees and all physical features with the surroundings of his dream mine.

Olsen forgot about the timber business and located a mining claim calling it the Dream mine. He sank a shaft to a depth of 50 feet. By his dream he had looked down the shaft and had faintly discerned the glimmer of a candle mounted on a shelf. Olsen estimates that the greatest depth at which one would be able to see such a light is about 100 feet, and he has now decided to sink the shaft further, in the belief that he will open up the vein.

The prospect is not too promising, but I never laugh at any ideas of a man who is taking Gold-You know, is where you find it," said Mayor Malone in concluding the story of Olsen's dream mining.

Squire Shifflett Praises It

BECAUSE IT CURED HIS BOY'S COUGH IN A HURRY.

Bear's Emulsion of Petroleum Puts the Body in Shape to Resist Germs of Consumption.

Squire P. P. Shifflett, one of the most successful farmers and business men in East Rockingham-writes Mr. John D. Bear, Elkton, Va.

"Dear Sir: Three years ago my little grandchild had a very bad cough and cold. We gave her nearly everything that was recommended for coughs, but she appeared to be getting worse all the time. My neighbor, E. E. Coffman, told me of Bear's Emulsion. I bought a bottle and a few doses began to make such a difference in the child that we all felt greatly relieved as we had been uneasy about the cough for some time. The remedy not only broke up the cough but toned up the system better than anything I ever saw. I can recommend it to any one wanting something for a cough or general tonic.

Yours respectfully,
 P. P. Shifflett.
