One of the plans for Chautauqua during the coming summer, when it reached here, according to Mr. T. F. Bulla, of the local Chautauqua Committee, is to decorate the big tent with pennants representing each of the 100 towns on the summer Chautauqua.

All winter the Chautauqua Association has been writing to the local committee to secure samples of these colors. In some cases the Chautauqua found that there were no special colors for the town and had to call a meeting of the Mayor, the President of the Board of Trade, the President of the Woman's Club, and the Superintendent of Schools, and officers of other organizations, to meet with the Chairman of the Chautauqua Committee to select colors. In many instances the high school colors were adopted.

In order to carry out this plan of decorating 14 big tents with pennants representing 100 towns, about 2,240 pennants were manufactured on a special order.

The committee has been receiving advice as to some of the new events that will appear at Chautauqua this summer, and they are expressing great pleasure over the prospect. The public will be made acquainted with the plans for 1914 through the officers of the Asheboro Chautauqua.

Matches and Fires.

The actual fire loss in the United States due to matches is reported to average $100,000 a day, or $36,000,000 annually. This is said to the loss represented in insurance. This is about 12 per cent of the total fire loss. The indirect loss represented in expenses involved in the maintenance of fire departments, water supply, etc., is fully equal to the direct loss, especially so if the loss in killed and injured and interruption to business, etc., is taken into consideration. The total economic loss from this one cause is, therefore, worthy of serious consideration by every one, and the question is how can it be abated? No such tremendous losses from this cause occur in other countries, nor would be tolerated. Why should the American public continue to tolerate such hazard?

Help for the Colored Man.

Nothing can be gained by reviving the discussion of the race question. People who are usually conservative and sensible on other subjects often lose their reason when the race question is considered. The negro is a citizen among us. Society and the State are interested in his industry and frugality. We need give more attention to the ways and means of removing temptations and giving the negro a better chance to raise his children to be peaceful, industrious citizens.

Experience teaches that the farm is the place for the industrious negro of the South. Here are fewer temptations; here is less competition for his labor; here is where his labor will count for more and bring him in greater returns. It is our duty to foster industrial education for the negro race, encourage home ownership and remove the evils that corrupt society and debauch the negro as well as the white man of our country who yields.

The States of the South and the Southwest have in most instances borne heavy burdens for the education of the negro, but too often the mistake has been made in the character of instructions given. The negro needs industrial training; he should be taught agriculture and mechanic arts. We still permit evils that cause crime and then wonder why it is that there is crime.

Iredell County Chooses New Board of Commissioners.

The results of the primary held in Statesville May 16th, indicates the re-nomination of Clerk of Court, J. A. Hartness, sheriff J. M. Deaton, register J. E. Boyd and treasurer, W. R. Sloan. The old board of county commissioners appear to be beaten. The returns indicate the nomination of N. B. Mills, a former chairman of the Board, W. G. Johnson, G. W. Baily, J. L. Turner and J. L. Beaver for commissioners. R. M. Gray, superintendent of education had no opposition. Returns as to the board of education are indefinite.

Mr. Hartness has been clerk of the Superior Court of Iredell county for sixteen years.

Spread Manure Often.

Don't wait for intervals of several weeks before spreading the manure over the fields, but do it often. By this means the loss of fertilizing elements is reduced to a minimum. Frequently, it happens, the great part of the manure is wasted and this is usually the liquid as well as some parts of the solid parts. If the manure is spread before the liquid begins to leave, the harder parts behind both can be saved and placed where they will jointly accomplish the purpose as fertilizer. If allowed to lay too long before removal, it can be seen that the farmer does not get all that is coming to him, or in other words, he gets about half pay for his trouble. In any case it is better to have the manure on the fields where the rains can take the fertilizing elements into the soil than it is to have a pile steadily growing in size near the barn and waiting for a near and more convenient day for the removal. This is for the benefit of the farmer who knows that hauling big piles of manure is hard work as well as taking a great amount of time. So many times the wagon is taken out in going to work and it is then that hauling a wagon load of manure would be very little extra trouble.

If the idea is firmly imbedded in the minds of some that it is better to pile the manure so that it may decompose and create an excess of ammonia, then by all means have the manure piling equipped so that the liquid will not escape. Of course it is known that animal manures when exposed to the air are apt to deteriorate on account of the volatilization and escape of their ammonia; but on the other hand too much ammonia is injurious to many plants, because the manure is "too strong" or holding an excess of ammonia and carbonic acid. Manure will seldom become too strong before being hauled away if an amount of vegetable refuse has been incorporated with it, which checks rapid putrefaction. Strong manures may be made proof against the loss of ammonia by the addition of an acid or sulphate of lime, or copperas. By the addition of vegetable matter, like straw, weed stalks, or leaves, the animal matter is more acceptable to the soil and at the same time they control the tendency of the manure to become too strong. Therefore, it will be seen that manure in which there is a large amount of vegetable refuse can be allowed to lay longer in a heap than the manure that is almost wholly that of animal origin.—Indiana Farmer.

OUR FRIENDS IN RANDELMAN

Give Added Praise. Their Statements Are Convincing.

It is gratifying for us to read such good news as the following, for it shows that the experience of our friends in Randleman is the same as that of many Asheboro men and women who have spoken out so heartily in these columns:

Mrs. Arthur Causey, Jerusalem St., Randleman, N. C., says: "Backache clung to me for a long time and made it hard for me to stoop. I could not remain on my feet long and often I became so dizzy that I had to catch hold of some thing to keep from falling. The kidney secretions annoyed me, and showed that my kidneys were out of order. When a friend strongly urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so. I was soon rid of kidney complaint."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CLASS POEM 1914 ASHEBORO GRADED SCHOOL
By Mabel Parrish
I wish when I behold my class so dear,
And know that the time for parting is near,
That an expression of my thought I might unfold,
And do justice to the class of garnet and gold.
Shoulder to shoulder for ten long years
We've been true to each other in trials and tears,
Always in our course we've found time for fun,
And tried to be merry from sun to sun.
And with our fun we've accomplished much
In arithmetic, Latin, Geometry and such.
Our studies each day have taken time and thought,
But surely our labor has not come to naught.
Now will you hear a description of the class?
How well each one the exams did pass,
How good we feel since we know we have won,
But yet how sad because school-days are done?
After much study I have reached this decision—
Our class must be placed into divisions;
There are those who study, and those who don't,
The ones who will learn and the ones who won't.
Lula, Rilla, Lucile and JessieWood
Always did their work as best they could;
They played the game and knew the limit
And still got all the fun there was in it.
Bessie, Beatrice, Mabel Spoon and Ward
Never bothered their brains over the lessons hard
They saw no trouble and were always at ease
They studied when they wanted to,—if you please.
Our boys in quantity are very small,
But in quality they are not so at all;
They are specialists in math, and history,
But to them Latin seems a mystery.
Lela and Virtie quite jolly and gay
Are sure to put sunshine in everyone's way;
They make you feel good and cause you to smile,
And make you think life is really worth while.
But the time has come for the parting of the class,
And into life's school we're about to pass;
So we sing our song and speak the farewell,
And bear this in mind, "All's well that ends well."
Farmers' Union to Meet.

"Where is Your Faith?"
On one occasion Jesus and his disciples were overtaken by a storm or wind on the lake. The disciples were scared out of their wits and seemingly forgot the presence of the Saviour. But at last they remembered him and sought his help. He quieted the winds and waves, and turning to the disciples, said: "Where is your faith?"
The Saviour might very pertinently ask his disciples the same question today on many subjects. Do we really believe in the sanctity of the Sabbath? Preachers and church members everywhere say yes. The Sunday newspapers is one of the greatest evils of our day and yet it is found in the homes of preachers and church members every Sabbath day. When the Sunday issue made its appearance it dumped a pile of corrupt reading matter into the homes of our Southland that could not be read in a week, and the impression of which will not be forgotten in a lifetime. And yet it received a welcome from the governors of the Southern States with their photographs, including the Senators from Georgia. Most of them, at least, were members of the Church, and all were leaders of the States respectively. Therefore their sanction will give even an evil movement sanction and recommend it to the people. Who ever attempted to read the Sunday issue through on Sunday surely had no time for church or the Bible.
Again we claim to believe in the temperance laws and welcome the results they bring. Most dailies carry large advertisements of whiskey, thus helping the liquor traffic to spread its wings even in Christian homes. And Christian people, including preachers, welcome and help pay for it. To that extent they help to make null our prohibition laws.
The so-called "funny page" of the average daily paper is filled with immoral pictures that are travesties on Christian home life. And yet while claiming to believe in the purity of the family and the sacredness of the marriage tie, these papers are welcomed in our "refined" Christian homes and spread before the children to read. To be sure everyone would like to get the news of the day that is clean and readable. But to get it, must and will Christian people follow the world to hell, desecrating the Sabbath, defying our prohibition laws in adding the liquor traffic to debauch our boys and corrupting our sacred home life by the indecent pictures of the "funny" page?
Is it not about time a few thousand preachers and church people who say they believe in the sanctity of the Sabbath and claim to support our prohibition laws and the purity of the home, should prove some of their faith by their works? As long as Christians take these papers so long will works contradict their faith. And just so long will people continue to say that they see no difference between the church people and the world, because they both do the same thing. Sin, from the human side, is great when great men sin. And truly when Christians, and Governors and Senators make the Sunday newspaper sin respectable by their sanction, the sin is just that much greater before God.
Do we believe in the sanctity of the Sabbath, the maintenance of law, the sobriety of our youth and the purity of the home? If we do one of the most effective ways of proving it is for a few
