There's Only One Oil Pull

RUMELY-LA PORTE

The wide-spread popularity of the Oil Pull Tractor, and the fact that it is the only tractor that can burn kerosene and the cheaper oils at all loads, and under all conditions, has caused the term Oil Pull to be applied to other oil-burning tractors.

There's Only One Oil Pull

RUMELY-LA PORTE

The name Oil Pull is registered. It can be used by no other.

The Oil Pull is the only tractor that can burn cheap kerosene or distillate—all the time.

In threshing, running electric generators, or any other belt work, the speed variation of the Oil Pull is less than 2% from last to first.

All kinds of tractive work the Oil Pull furnishes steady, reliable power at a minimum expense.

Danger from fire is minimized. The Oil Pull is simple in construction—any intelligent person can run it after a little instruction.

The Oil Pull is oil-cooled; no danger of radiator freezing; is particularly equipped for road-building. Three sizes, 15-30, 25-45, and 30-50 horse power.

Behind the Oil Pull is the Rumely service, 49 branches and 11,000 dealers. Supplies and repairs on short notice. Ask for Oil Pull catalog No. 153.

Speaking Up for Snakes.

For too long a time snakes have been looked upon as the cause of the fall of man, and hence as the enemy of our human progress. In the case are that man has few better friends than the harmless snake. The ignorance about this class of animals in every country section, however, is dense enough to be cut with a knife like cheese.

Almost all the snakes that we have in the United States, and particularly this part of the United States, are harmless. But for them we would be overwhelmed with mice rats, toads and insects of harmful kinds. Without harm to us they stand as protecting agencies of crops and stored-up foods. All the black snakes, the garters, the milk snakes, the ground snakes, the hog-nosed adders, the water snakes, the tree snakes, the king snakes, the horn snakes are harmless. In fact, in Guilford county we have but one snake that is venomous, and that is the copperhead. Throughout the United States there are but three other venomous varieties. The rattler appears under a score of colors and names, and as is usually understood, is the most venomous snake we have in America. Next to him is the copperhead. Nearly or quite as venomous as the copperhead is the cotton-mouth water moccasin, which, by the way, is the only poisonous water snake out of over 250 varieties. The bead snake, or helquin snake, is one variety only (elaps fulvius) that is venomous. This snake seldom grows more than 15 or 18 inches in length and is confined to Florida and to some half dozen neighboring States. . . . They are to be found in large numbers in most streams in the eastern part of North Carolina, river and its tributaries in Piedmont North Carolina.

and as far north as the Pee Dee. It is a great pity that children are not taught to recognize copperheads and cotton-mouth water moccasins at sight—as they do rattlers. To be sure these varieties of snakes should be killed. It is a great pity, however, that they should be allowed to form the habit of killing the harmless snakes indiscriminately.

It is not a difficult thing to recognize the copperhead by sight. His markings are perfectly plain and cannot be mistaken for the markings of any other snake. The cotton-mouth moccasin, which is marked very much like a copperhead. It is not generally known that the rattler, copperhead, and water moccasin are closely related, being the only snakes in America which have pits between the eyes and nose, which bring forth their young alive (viviparous instead of oviparous). They are sometimes called the pit vipers. There are distinct traces in both the latter of having at some time in the past been rattlers themselves, but having in the course of time evolved from this condition into their present condition, just as the horse from being a five-toed animal has, through the course of evolution, become a one-toed animal.

Parents and teachers should do far more in the future than they have ever done in the past to become acquainted with the world around them, and to acquaint those around them with the world around them. Prof. H. H. Holt in Greensboro News.

The Political Game.

Recent campaigns for the Democratic nomination in the Third, Seventh and Ninth Congressional districts in North Carolina again serve to emphasize the fact that when a man goes into politics he ought to be about as imperturbable as the Sphinx, should possess the toughness of a rhinoceros, and retain the resiliency of a rubber tire in running over rough ground across obstacles. That has been a pretty cantankerous campaign in the Third, and especially in Craven county the fuses have been sputtering low these many days.

Some old-time, toughened politicians have been in the game in the different districts, but while they may have their sore spots, everybody seems to be taking what comes to him. In the Seventh-Brother R. F. Beasley of the Monroe Journal, who contested with Representative Page for the nomination, does not seem to have been accustomed to being knocked when there was no earthly excuse for knocking. He does not appear to be sore-headed at all, but in a card thanking his loyal friends in Union county he protests against "the viciousness which led men to conduct such an uncalculated and underhanded campaign against a citizen of the county." He was deliberately misrepresented during the campaign, his views were perverted and his position undermined at every turn.

That was tough on a nice, lady-like fellow, such as an editor is, and we agree with him that misrepresentation is exceedingly reprehensible in the Democratic party. We have reason to be glad, however, that there was not the "vituperation" peculiar to South Carolina campaigns in the recent past. No body seems to have been "maligned" to any great extent in this year's political rucus in North Carolina. Considering the circumstances, Editor Beasley made a good run. His vote indicates that he has a larger following in the district while the larger vote for his opponent was not so much against Beasley as it was an expression of sentiment against putting out one good man so another could be put in his place. Nevertheless, misrepresentation and dirty methods within the party will have to be cut out. It ought to defeat any candidate who adopts such disreputable methods or permits his friends to do it for him.—Wilmington Star.

TOLD IN ASHEBORO.

A Resident Known to All Our Readers Recites An Experience.

Readers of The Courier have been told again and again of the merits of that reliable, time-tried kidney remedy—Doan's Kidney Pills. The experiences told are not those of unknown persons, living far away. The cases are Asheboro cases, told by Asheboro people. Asheboro, N. C., says: "I have Mrs. B. B. Kendall, Church St., used Doan's Kidney Pills, prescribed from the Standard Drug Co., and I consider them a most reliable remedy for regulating the kidneys and curing backache. Doan's Kidney Pills of my family and the results have always been satisfactory." Price 50 cents. Foster-McBirn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Latin-American Recreation.
 Several South American countries are indulging in the favorite Latin-American amusement, revolution. They are hardly in Mexico's class, as yet. Last week Venezuela rebels captured two towns on the Orinoco.

Sure Death to Bugs.
 The Department of Agriculture has just discovered two infallible cures for cock-rosches.

According to the directions of the government experts you should get a quantity of stale beer—the staler the better, because the fumes are stronger—and place it in a number of shallow pans near the run ways of the roaches. On the surface of the beer you should place a number of little rafts, made of thin board like the top of an old cigar box.

This should be done before retiring, and in theory there won't be any cock-rosches left to bother you when you rise in the morning. According to the government bugologists, the little bugs are very fond of stale beer and they will climb into the pans and drink some of it. The majority of the pests are expected to swim along the surface of the beer until they come to the rafts. They will clamber aboard these and will be overcome by the fumes of the stale beer, and they will drop off the raft and be drowned in the amber juice.

The government believes in this scheme to such an extent that it has issued a pamphlet or bulletin setting forth the plan in detail, and giving diagrams of the beer traps for the roaches. So there must be something in it.

The Department of Agriculture has furnished another idea which is just as simple as the first, but has the advantage of not entailing the use of spirituous liquors. All you need for this process of extermination is a little plaster of Paris, a little sugar and some water. You simply mix the plaster of Paris with the sugar in order to make it palatable to the hungry roach, and place the pan of water nearby. Mr. Roach comes up to the white powder, and attracted by the sweetness of the powdered sugar consumes a considerable quantity of it. Then being thirsty after this feast he goes over to the water and quenches his thirst. A moment later the plaster of Paris sets in the intestines of the insect and he drops dead.

TURNER'S ROMANCE

NO. 13.

This is the opening of the campaign of 1864. We broke up camp and made our way into the Wilderness near Chancellorsville where we had fought in May, 1863. The Wilderness was the right name for the place. The large growth was all cut and gone and it was a thicket of small green briars and bushes of all kinds. We could not get along without falling and tangling our feet. We fought through all day, early in May, 1864. Both sides did all they could, and it was hard on both Yankees and Confederates. There were lots of our boys and their's killed and wounded. When the battle was over, we marched northward. It seemed to me we were looking for those Yankees to get to fight them again. It was skirmish and fight them every day. We fell back and ran up with them near Spotsylvania Courthouse when we had another heavy battle. I think this was May 11, 1864. Then we marched towards Petersburg, going about the same way Jackson went before the Seven Days' battle below Richmond.

We reached Cold Harbor, on the Chickahominy River, and here we met them again for another fight. There were the most men killed here in the shortest time that I saw in any battle during the war.

After the battle was over we had a few prisoners our boys had taken. They were brought to our colors for us to hold until a guard was selected to take them to Richmond. One of the men looked at me and said, "Sergeant, I want to talk with you." "Owing to what you want to talk about, whether I will answer you," I replied. "I wish to ask if General Lee has any men in his army from any State besides North Carolina," he said. "Why do you ask that question?" I inquired. "Well," said he, "I've been in 23 battles and have not met a man except from that State, and I thought his whole army was from there."

After this, we started on our way to Petersburg, crossing the James river eight miles below Richmond, at Drew's Bluff. We then went to the Halfway Station between Richmond and Petersburg, a part of the army going by railroad and the others marching. We went about four miles south, on the Welton Railroad, where we had another hard battle. Here we lost several of our boys. After the battle, we marched back through Petersburg, crossed the Appomattox river and went down it about three-quarters of a mile and fought a battle. We lay in them for several days. We could not show a head above them, or a ball would come at us.

In March I was examined by our doctor and recommended for a discharge. The order came to my captain August 2, 1864, and on the 3rd I left the army of Lee and Jackson, in which I had served since 1861. I came home, and on the 18th day of the same month was conscripted on light duty and was attached to Company B, first Battalion of light duty men. Our commander was Major Hahar of Wake county. I was orderly sergeant of the company and was present at Greensboro when Johnston surrendered to Sherman, April 26, 1865.

In my next I shall tell of my travels in this State through the last year of the war.

Keep the Lungs Clean

Bear's Emulsion builds the lungs and throat and builds up the system, regulates the bowels and improves the appetite.

Don't blame your parents for giving you consumption. The best way to keep from having consumption is to keep the lungs and throat in a good healthy condition. You do not inherit consumption, but you can inherit weak lungs. And as the air is filled with Tubercule bacilli germs, your weak lungs are a fine feeding place for them. Now what are you going to do—let your lungs get weaker each year by the action of the standing coughs on them?

If you want to heal the lungs, don't get these patented cough remedies that are doped up with morphine, cocaine or some drug that will temporarily soothe the throat and leaves the throat and lungs in a worse condition than before.

At the Standard Drug Co. One dollar a bottle or six bottles for five dollars.

An Old Chair.
 This week while soliciting upholstery work in Bluefield for the upholstering department of the Graham Mattress Company, R. E. Cox of High Point took an order to upholster a rocker which is more than a hundred years old. The chair was made in the days when cabinet work was practically all done in sand, and it shows a fine piece of workmanship. That part of the chair which is upholstered is made of maple and oak while the seats, rockers and other exposed parts are made from the highest grade black walnut. One other feature is that it is more strongly made than furniture recently made. Every piece of wood in this chair is of the highest grade.—The Banner, Graham, Va.

FIX UP YOUR LIVER AND FEEL GOOD

Why Risk Being "All Knocked Out" by Quinine? Dodson's Liver Tonic Takes Its Place and is Safe.

When you are constipated and your liver is sluggish it is no longer necessary to try to fix yourself up with quinine, which everyone now knows to be a poison, that sometimes remains in the system and causes evil after-effects—and is often very dangerous to many people. Dodson's Liver Tonic is guaranteed to take the place of calomel to be a pleasant-tasting, easy-acting vegetable liquid, with no bad effects and causing no pain nor gripe nor interference with your regular duties, habits or diet. If you are not entirely satisfied with Dodson's Liver Tonic, go back to the store where you bought it and get your money back. It belongs to you and Dodson wants you to have it.

The Asheboro Drug Co. sells and recommends Dodson's Liver Tonic and they will cheerfully refund purchase price (50c.) instantly, without question if the remedy fails to please you in every way. Its use has proved beneficial to many thousands and probably will to you.

Becker or the Babes. Which?
 The New York Police Commissioner Becker, has again been convicted of murder in the first degree. Everybody knows that the papers are full of it, and Becker will probably die before the summer is over. But who is this one Becker, that we should be mindful of him? Right here in North Carolina there will be blotted out about 2,000 of our little innocent babies. Becker, the murdered, will meet his death this summer, even more surely than fate.

Becker may have one chance in a hundred to get a pardon or a new trial, but the only chance our babies have is against a relentless army of myriads of flies fresh from the old open-back privies. These disease-bearing flies are reinforced by dirty milk, collected perhaps from dirty cows in dirty stables and certainly in old dirty buckets not thoroughly scalded and washed out. And so it goes.

Baby's only chance is in being given natural food, at least for the first 10 months; in being kept away from flies and fly-infected food at all other times; and in being under the care of an intelligent mother. If any one has to eat fly-infected food, let it be an adult. We can perhaps stand a little of the fly's filth, provided it is not from a typhoid patient or a consumptive, but a baby is almost sure to contract summer complaint from such filth. In three cases out of four, this should really be called fly complaint or filth complaint.—Bulletin N. C. State Board of Health.

Growing Usefulness of "Movies."
 Moving pictures are now used by the War Department to teach raw recruits the drill, the field movements, etc.

"Hon."
 Isn't there any way to stop the incorrect use of "Hon."? It is a cinch that it will never be stopped so long as public school teachers are chief sinners. Every time they have on their school closing programs some man who has run for office, or has filled some office that does not entitle him to the distinction, they put it on the program, "Address by Hon. So and So." Just plain Mr. is a prouder "handle" than "Hon." unless a man has occupied some office that makes the title a matter of course—and many people have yet to learn, apparently, that running for Congress, or being mentioned for Governor, or running for or even being elected to the Legislature, does not entitle one to that distinction. It is stuck around so promiscuously, even cross-roads politicians being dubbed "Hon." by people who ought to know better, that it is something of an insult to so label an upstanding, independent, perfectly respectable gentleman who is not fairly entitled to it. Let's leave it to the unwashed or use it intelligently.—Lumberton Robesonian.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
 by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and this is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
