MRS. ALLRED KILLS HERSELF

Mrs. Hessie Allred, age about 30 years, committed suicide at Winston-Salem Saturday by throwing herself before one of the Southern Public Utilities Company's heavy cars. Before the car could be stopped she had been dragged some distance and badly mangled, the legs and arms having been cut and broken and the face and head made unrecognizable. The deed is said to have resulted from brooding over her troubles. She is survived by two little girls of about eight and ten years.

Mrs. Allred went from near Kornersville to Winston-Salem. Her husband deserted her some two or three years ago, leaving her to support the little girls by working in the P. H. Hanes Knitting Mills. She long kept up the struggle, but the strain was too much for her. In brooding over the desertion and her lot in the world, her mind began to wander and she frequently remarked that she was in the way. Saturday morning she tried to get some one to shoot her and after they refused she said she was going to die anyway. Her people with whom she was boarding tried to watch her but she eluded them and threw herself before a car.

BISHOP STRANGE DEAD

He improved greatly and in a few months returned to Wilmington and was able to take part in the services held in the different churches. Some weeks ago, however, there was a decided change for the worse and he was treated by physicians and was thought to be better until Wednesday of last week, he became worse and died on Saturday.

Alberta, Alta., leads the American continent in child protection. The Child Saving Department at Washington, D. C., says: Alberta's work stands out pre-eminent as the best of the continent."

GRADY LANE PAYS THE DEATH PENALTY

Grady Lane, a mulatto, aged 20, and formerly of Randolph county, was put to death in the electric chair at Raleigh last Friday at 10:30 o'clock. He thus paid the penalty of murder in the first degree, charged and sustained against him in the superior court of Moore county in February when he was brought to trial for the killing of George McCain, another negro. He protested his innocence to the last, and despite the efforts of the minister to get him to confess the crime, he would not do so, saying that he knew nothing about it, although he was with the murdered man on the afternoon of the occurrence.

Twenty men were in the death chamber to witness the execution. A number of these were from Moore county. His father, Job Lane, was with him a great deal just before he died. His mother and sister were also in Raleigh to see him on Wednesday.

The body was brought to Mitchell, about eight miles southeast of Asheboro and buried last Saturday. Job Lane, the father of the dead man, lived in the Mitchell neighborhood until about five or six years ago, when they moved near Aberdeen. The family was always considered respectable colored people, but the boy, Grady, was rather wild. He was a nephew of Charles Lane, of Asheboro.

Almost forty young people were invited and enjoyed to the fullest the spacious porch which was lighted by Japanese lanterns. ## COLLEGES FIGHT TYPHOID College Presidents From All Over the State Agree to Offer Free Anti-Typhoid Treatment.

An open letter has just gone out to all the college presidents in the state calling attention to the increased danger from typhoid at this time of the year and to the value of the anti-typhoid vaccine now furnished free by the state. The college authorities were quick to see the importance of this preventive measure and by return mail over twenty replies were received, while others are arriving in every mail. Without exception every college president thus far has agreed to arrange to offer the treatment free of charge to their respective colleges this fall to all students who can be induced to thus protect themselves.

President E. K. Graham, of the University, writes: "We shall be glad to avail ourselves of this opportunity to secure anti-typhoid vaccine for the University students next year. Last year I think half the students took the treatment and during the past summer several hundred Summer School teachers were vaccinated."

President D. H. Hill, of the A. & M. writes: "Our institution arranged nearly a month ago to have everything in readiness to offer to all new students the anti-typhoid treatment and to do this free of charge. The college physician will administer the treatment as part of his official duty. We thank you for your kind interest in the matter."

Rev. George W. Lay, of St. Mary's School, says: "I shall take pleasure in offering this treatment to our students and urging it upon them. I am both grieved and angered when I hear from time to time of the death of some person in the prime of life and vigor with promise for a useful future being taken away so unnecessarily by typhoid when the sure means of prevention without pain or sickness is so easily at hand."

President R. H. Wright, of the East Carolina Training School writes: "I will not only be glad to have every student take it but I will talk to them about the importance of it and insist upon their taking it. I feel that the students should take this treatment and that they should spread the news throughout the state."

President W. A. Harper, of Elon College, says: "I thank you for the offer to furnish us anti-typhoid vaccine for our student body free of charge. I will appreciate your sending the vaccine to our college physician."

President Julius L. Foust, of the State Normal and Industrial College, writes: "I am sure our college physician will be glad to offer anti-typhoid treatment free of charge to all our students."

This represents the general tone of all the replies received thus far in regard to the state's offer. No one appreciates more than these men the responsibility of having under their direction the young people of our state nor do any class of people except physicians and health officers, have a keener sense of the danger and utter needlessness of this preventable filth disease, than these college presidents.

Parents sending their sons and daughters to college should, if possible, have them take the anti-typhoid treatment before they go or at least know that they will receive the treatment after reaching college.

A WISE POLICY

The News and Observer.

The Wilson administration can always be depended upon to scent the morals of a proposition. In its direction of the affairs of this country, it has not hesitated to break a precedent if a question of right or wrong was even indirectly involved. Right and not expediency has been the controlling principle. By this principle dollar diplomacy got its death blow, and a tariff that did not give the big fellow an advantage over the little fellow was adopted, a currency law that did not give a single great center of finance dominance in the financial situation was written into the law, a policy toward Mexico that withheld recognition from a government founded on murder was adopted. And the same principle has been observed in every great question that has come up.

In line with this same practice of seeking to find the morals of a question is the recently attitude of the administration to discourage the floating of loans in this country by any of the belligerent European nations. The administration occupied new and high ground in this respect just as it was expected it would do, for it is not bound by precedents when the influence of the government in setting new standards of right and wrong is in the balance.

Of course it was seen at once that for this government to loan money to any of the belligerent nations was a violation of neutrality, international authorities being agreed on that point. But the same authorities were agreed that the subjects of neutral nations might loan money to nations at war. This country, however, looked more deeply into the question than has ordinarily been done and took the position that even for the subjects of a neutral nation to loan money is a circumstance calculated to impair the neutrality of that nation. So the policy of the nation was announced by Secretary of State Bryan, with the approval of President Wilson, as being in opposition to the floating of such loans.

The logic of the position of the administration is apparent. In the larger sense this country is responsible for the conduct of its citizens toward the warring nations. For its private financial institutions to loan money to the nations at war is so close to this country lending aid itself that the difference is inconsequential.

This country is against war whenever war can be avoided with honor, and it believes the war in Europe could have been avoided without the sacrifice of honor. Being against war

TRAGEDY AT RANDLEMAN

ONE MAN IN DYING CONDITION AS THE RESULT OF A PISTOL SHOT—QUARREL OVER A WOMAN.

Paul Byars was shot and perhaps fatally injured by Isaac Randolph at the home of Randolph in north Randleman last Saturday about noon. The shooting is said to have resulted from a quarrel over Lillie Briles, a woman of Randleman. It appears that Byars Randolph and a third man, named Hollars, gathered at the home of Randolph early in the morning and had been there drinking, playing cards, etc., all the morning. About two o'clock Whit Russell passed the house and Randolph pointed a pistol out of the window and told him to halt. Russell told him to "fire away" and Randolph fired one shot but Russell paid little attention and is not sure that it was fired at him. Some time during the next hour and a half Randolph shot Byars, but there were no eye witnesses to tell the story. The man Hollars was at the Randolph house, but was so drunk that he remembers nothing about the shooting. He says that he barely remembers looking up one time and seeing Byars bleeding badly after he had been shot. When arrested he was so drunk that he did not know what happened until he woke up in the calaboose.

Byars was carried to his home and every possible attention given him for the past few days, but it is reported that there is no hope of his recovery.

A preliminary hearing was held before J. A. Russell, J. P., at 4:30 Saturday afternoon and Randolph and Hollars were bound over to court without bail.

Byars in an affidavit made before several people of Randleman said that he and Randolph quarreled over Lillie Briles and that Randolph shot him, saying: "I'm glad I killed you—you know too much on me." Lillie Briles was arrested at High Point Monday afternoon and put under $100 bond for her appearance at the trial.

All the parties in the shooting live in Randleman and are employed in the Deep River Cotton Mills. Randolph is about thirty-five years old and has lived in Randleman only a short time, having moved there from Spartanburg, S. C., while Byars, who is also about thirty-five, moved there a short time ago from Bessemer City. Byars is a married man.

Randolph seems to be in a cheerful mood in jail here. It is said that he made the statement that Byars shot himself, when he—Byars—was shooting at him—Randolph—that he threw up the pistol and the ball hit Byars, but this is not a very likely story, considering the nature of the gun shot. The ball entered Byars' right shoulder, coming out under the left shoulder blade.

BAPPY JIMMIE ROBINSON

Colonel Jim Robinson, who calls himself "Old Hurygraph," writes to this newspaper as follows from the mountains of North Carolina:

"I am up above the clouds—the rain clouds, the war clouds, and the clouds of doubt and fear as to the beauty and grandeur of this lovely country, and its unexcelled climate. Every view is a scene of beauty in nature unparalleled. I was standing by the famous rock Monday, looking out upon the great chasm of mountains below covered with fleecy clouds as white as the driven snow. Only the face of the great Grandfather Mountain was visible above this ocean of whiteness. The sun gilded every rife and ripple with a golden sheen. The white moved up to the precipice of the Blowing Rock, and backed up against the great rock walls. There appeared, two hundred feet below me, three beautiful rainbows, all in a line. It was witnessed by many spectators, who gathered together and the shadow of their heads were thrown in the center of it, and it represented a lovely halo around it. It was a scene not often witnessed, yet it was but one of the beautiful views, that are ever presenting themselves in a country filled with beauty."

How happy a man might be up so high that sugar could go no higher—up where the war clouds and the rain clouds couldn't touch him. That is where Jim seems to be, and he writes like he wasn't caring much about the things below the clouds.—Everything.

It will do nothing to make war possible. The European nations have got to have money to keep up the murderous war that they are waging on one another. Money is the sinews of war. The sooner the strong box of the belligerents is exhausted the sooner the fearful and useless slaughter of human beings will stop. The administration struck a blow for peace and set a new standard for international morality when it put its foot down with emphasis on the proposition that Morgan & Company or any other banking house should lend money to the belligerents, or to any agency that might be directly or indirectly connected with them.
