FORESTS MADE INEXHAUSTIBLE.

Intelligent Conservation of Standing Timber by Butters Lumber Company Enables its Forests to Go on Producing Timber and Wealth Year After Year.

The Butters Lumber Company, at its mill, will increase the sawing capacity of its mill from 85,000 feet lumber per day to 115,000 feet per day. This mill has been running more than a quarter of a century and yet the same timber tracts keep the mill supplied with timber at the full capacity of the plant. Indeed, the company is enabled by its new timber supply to increase its output thirty-five per cent.

The company is enabled to do this by intelligent conservation of its standing timber. It has kept out guards to protect the forests from fires, hogs and stock, and by a system of forest protection and tree care Mr. E. B. Wright, its general manager, says the large plant can be operated indefinitely so long as the same forest preserving and nursing method is followed.

There is a large saw mill that cuts usually an average of 25,500,000 feet of lumber, or about 637 billion feet in twenty-five years, and yet the company's forests go on producing an inexhaustible supply of raw material for the mill.

The example of the Butters Lumber Company ought to be followed all over North Carolina. It is deserving of the highest commendation and worthy of emulation by those to whose tender mercies the great valuable forests of the state have been committed. Such a policy as theirs would be worth millions of dollars a year to North Carolina in the conservation of its pine and hardwood forests.

Intelligent method and effective system of the Butters Lumber Company management is in strange contrast with the lack of it on the part of the vandals who have allowed the forests and left out over lands to become a waste and a prey, and to rack hogs, tick bitten bovines, and devastating fires, often set by the thoughtless who burn the woods to make pastures for a few scrawny, wretched, melancholy pedigreed, and woeful destruction of tidal North Carolina's grand and impressive long leaf pine forests, and the consequent annual loss of millions of dollars in value is a sad commentary upon the brand of civilization. Yet there are those who fight the wolf in the woods and stand for the wood range that the cattle and plays havoc rest wealth exceeded no-

WHY ADVERTISE

There are actually, in this enlightened, progressive age, men engaged in business the success of which depends upon the attitude of the public towards that business, and yet these men do not advertise. For the education of such men we quote the following prose poem:

Mary had a little lamb, his fleece was white as snow; it strayed away one summer day, where lambs should never go. Then Mary sat down and tears streamed from her pretty eyes; she never found her lamb because she did not advertise. And Mary had a brother, John, who kept the village store; he sat down and smoked his pipe and watched the open door. As people passed along but did not stop to buy, John still sat down and smoked his pipe and blinked his sleepy eye. And so the sheriff closed him out, but still he lingered near, and Mary came and dropped with him a sympathizing tear. "How is it sister, that all the other merchants here sell all the goods and pay their bills and thrive from year to year?" "Remembering, now, her own bad luck, the little maid replied: "The other fellows got there, John, because they advertised."

where else on the face of the earth. The Butters Lumber Company's mill has manufactured about $5,000,000 worth of lumber from its timber lands and as its output is now worth $400,000, that shows its annual value of the kind of conservation that enables the forest to go on producing timber and wealth year in and year out. The company is now cutting its third growth of timber. When properly cared for the forests rapidly reproduce, and it is only such conservation method that will prevent forest exhaustion in North Carolina.

But Husband, With Aid of Cardui, Effects Her Deliverance.

Draper, N. C.—Mrs. Helen Dalton, of this place, says: "I suffered for years, with pains in my left side, and would often almost die."
 Medicines patched me up for awhile but then I would get worse again. Finally, my husband decided he wanted me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, so he bought me a bottle and I began using it. It did me more good than all the medicines I had taken.

I have induced many of my friends to try Cardui, and they all say they have been benefited by its use. There never has been, and never will be, a medicine to compare with Cardui. I believe it is a good medicine for all womanly troubles."

For over 50 years, Cardui has been relieving woman's sufferings and building weak women up to health and strength. If you are a woman, give it a fair trial. It should surely help you, as it has a million others.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Director of Evening Department, The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.)

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER

THE GREAT COMMANDMENTS.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:31-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." Luke 10:27.

This lesson considers a third question asked of our Lord; two others in this connection we studied last week. It was not so much a question of placing one commandment in competition with another, but rather which commandment most clearly epitomizes or reveals the final principle in law. It was the business of this scribe to know the law and to interpret the commandments. Jesus in his reply quotes from Deut. 5:4, and from Lev. 19:18, which are both in a sense an exposition of the Decalogue.

Love the Basis.

I. The answer of Jesus, vv. 28-34. The scribe's question seemed to be quite specific and so the Lord strikes at once at the heart and by his quotation reveals to us the fact that the principle which is the inspiration of the law is that of love. In passing we have here another illustration of the master's ready use and knowledge of the Scripture. Jesus makes a four-fold summary. Man must love God with (a) the heart, e. g., in sincerity and uprightness; (b) with the soul, with the warmth of the emotions, and the feelings; (c) "with all thy mind," the intellect, not as a blind devotee; (d) with "strength," viz., with intensity of service, with energy. "To love God with all the heart and soul and mind and strength is to have supreme desire for and delight in God's glory, making everything else second to that." This statement is but half, for the complement of our love of God is to love man. Man created in God's image was "so loved" by God that he gave his son (John 3:16); man can do not less and must express that love in service to others. To fail in the first is to break the greatest of the commandments and therefore to be guilty of all, Rom. 3:23.

Human and Deity.

II. The question of Jesus, vv. 35-37. Our Lord's question in return was a Messianic one and he grounds his argument on the 110th Psalm, a Messianic one. Jesus is inferior to David as his son according to the flesh but superior to him as lord of the kingdom of which David himself is a subject and not the sovereign. Christ is both human and deity; his kingdom is spiritual and earthly sovereigns are honored if they are his subjects.

III. The teaching of Jesus, vv. 38-40. The word "doctrine" in verse 38 is translated "teaching" in the revision. These words of warning are full of solemn significance. The scribes, and they have their imitators today, sought the places of preferment, the seats of honor in the synagogue and the chief places at the feasts. The motive that governed them was a selfish one. They devoted widows' houses, and sought to cover their covetousness and dishonesty by long prayers and a pretense of piety. This brought upon them the "greater condemnation," Matt. 23:51. Law and love is here again in contrast. Law must become life.

IV. The view of Jesus, vv. 41-44.

Jesus had one look of love and compassion for his friends and the needy and another that was exceedingly terrible for his enemies. Thus it was as a master teacher that he saw right at hand an illustration for his lesson, an application of the truth in the case of the widow who gave out of her penny and because of her love for God, supporting these carping, selfish scribes. She had two mites (about four-fifths of a cent) and might have withheld one except that the rabbi forbade the offering of a single one. Her love, however, went beyond the "tenth" and she gave "all," therefore in proportion to their means she "cast more than they all," see II Cor. 8:12. Offerings are needed still for the Lord's work. Jesus is "over against the treasure" and "sees" who it is that "casts in" how much they cast and the motive behind the gift. The master's standard of a commendable offering is not according to our superfluity, but our deficiency, not what will be missed but what sacrifice and in proportion thereto. Not to please man, but God. Read II Cor. 8:1-3. Our Lord's valuation of gifts cast into the treasury remains for all time the true standard of measurement.

The love of God unifies a man. We love because he first loved us, and in proportion as we truly apprehend his love, all that we have of heart, life, strength and mind, yes, our whole nature will unite in love. It is this which unifies society. To love him that begets is to love him that is begotten. To love God is to love man and to keep all of the divine commands that concern our relations to him.

As this woman left it is possible that she was ashamed of the smallness of her gift but it pleased the Lord.

THE EFFECT OF THE WAR ON THE PRICE OF COTTON

(From Rock Hill (S. C.) Record, August 10, 1914.)

Here is one man who is not alarmed over the situation produced by the European conflict. Mr. John G. Anderson, president of the Rock Hill Buggy Company, when interviewed by a Record man as to conditions, said:

"I do not believe the people of the Cotton States have any real cause for alarm over the apprehension of losing the bulk of the cotton crop on account of a low price incident to the European war."

"The people of the world must be fed and clothed as usual. If they are interrupted for a few weeks in transportation facilities that ought not to bankrupt us, because a way will be found to supply them. There will be no embargo on the commerce of the Pacific. England is our biggest customer for raw cotton, and she may be depended upon to keep her mills running. She must have our cotton. Her navy will see to that.

"There need not be any fear in this country on account of the supply of money. The government has already attended to that. Farmers can, this fall, easier than ever before, arrange to borrow money on their cotton if they want to carry it over. This is absolutely assured.

"Business should move along as usual. In fact, I look for a period of unusual prosperity in this country, and especially in the South, on account of the conditions in Europe. It is too bad to profit by our neighbors' misfortunes, but that is just what the war means to the United States.

"Our cotton mills have been running along from hand to mouth since the panic of 1907; many of them losing money and few able to make both ends meet. Some have not been able to keep running half the time while others have gone into bankruptcy and are now standing still. The war means that they will very soon be running to full capacity, and if many of them can get labor, running night and day.

"This means employment for thousands at good wages, who are now idle most of the time, and an increase in the consumption of raw cotton of not less than 50 per cent. The cotton crop will not be sacrificed; we can manufacture most of it and send it abroad, not as raw material, but as a finished product at good prices. When the war is over we will be able to hold to most of the trade that is now waiting for us.

"But suppose that on account of the war the world consumes only 12,000,000 bales, and we have to carry over 2,000,000 to another season? That condition would not spell disaster. The surplus can be financed and cotton carried without the slightest difficulty. In fact, twice that amount could easily be handled, and the finances of the country not strained.

"In such a contingency the farmer next year would decrease his acreage, and by the time the next crop was harvested, matters would be evened up, with the producers' barns full of corn, hay and other crops with his everlasting benefit. If the war only has the effect of forcing the farmer to diversify his crops it will be of great benefit to him. The curse of the South is this all-cotton theory of farming. I have absolute confidence in the ability of the country, the South especially, to take care of itself. Business should go along as usual.

A SPLENDID PROGRAM FOR UPLIFT

Winston-Salem Journal.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times in North Carolina is the widespread interest among our most thoughtful citizens in the Social Service Week. The State organization which is engaged in pushing this work of uplift has had a rapid growth in membership, and there are now nearly one thousand members.

The resolutions adopted at the conference at Raleigh recently, show what a splendid program for uplift the leaders in this great movement have adopted. These resolutions are as follows:

1. Favoring the organization of Church and Social Service Leagues in every North Carolina city and town.
2. Favoring a campaign to teach grown-up people to read and write as has been done in the now famous Kentucky moonlight schools.
3. Urging colleges to give more attention to economics, sociology and the race problem.
4. Favoring compulsory vaccination against both small pox and typhoid fever.
5. Endorsing Civic Service week and urging that it be made all over the state.
6. Favoring farm women's clubs, community social centers, and the steady development of homogeneous communities from the racial standpoint for the better support of all social agencies.
7. Endorsing the uniform child labor law, the fourteen year age limit with adequate inspection.
8. Endorsing the indeterminate sentence system, parole system, and giving prisoner's earnings to his family.
9. Favoring State-wide adoption of the Guilford county law making property owners responsible who rent for immoral purposes.
10. Urging legislature to appoint House and Senate Committees on Social welfare.
11. Favoring a law to make cohabitation of the races a crime.
