His departure.

He was a kind and affectionate boy. To know him was to love him. It is not known at what time he accepted Jesus Christ as his per-onal Savior, but during his sickness he told his relatives and friends that he was ready and did not fear death.

Just before departing this life, he called his heartbroken parents, brothers, sisters and friends to his bedside, biding them sood bye and most earnestly urged them all to meet him in heaven, saying 'A am going up.'

What consolation this should be to the bereaved pagents, brothers, sisters and friends. I will say to them not to grieve after their dear one, but treasure up his dying words in their hearts and remember that their loss is his eternal gain, and that another supririties good here have likely to the properties. is his eternal gain, and that another spiritual cord has been linked to their hearts that draws them nearer to Him that giveth and to Him that taketh away. fund for a better public school fund fund for a better public school fund has increased from 30 in1900 to approximatel 1,800 in 1914, an increase of 1,570 local tax districts in 14 years. At least 1,400 of these districts are districtly rural. In territory they are scattered from Dare to Cherokee. The idea of improving public schools by local taxation is rapidly spreading. The total amount raised in 1912-13 by local taxation for schools was $1,250,480.47; of which $504,319,50 was for rural schools, which was an increase of 11 per cent over the preceding year in funds raised by local taxation.

Rural Libraries.

The Democratic General Assembly of 1961 passed an act appropriating $5,000 biënnially to the establishment of rural libraries, the number being limited to six to the county and the conditions being that the district applying for libraries should raise $10 by private subscription and that $10 should be taken from the school fund and $10 from the State appropriation, making $30 in all for each library. The General Assembly of 1903 appropriated the same amount biennially The General Assembly of 1903 appropriated the same amount biennially for the establishment of new libraries upon the same terms and $2,500 biennially in addition for supplementing libraries already established, not more than $15 to be allowed for the supplementary libraries—$5 from the State appropriation, $5 from private

Superintendent of Public Instruction and the various county superintendents show that for these increased expenditures the people and the children were given value received in the shape of better schoolhouses and equipment, more and better teachers (paid better salaries), longer school terms, more efficient county superintendents and supervisors, a better organized and more efficient school system in all respects, extending from primary grades through the public high schools.

For illustration: In 1906 and 1907 For illustration: In 1906 and 1907 the increase in the rural public school fund over the preceding year was $201,759.05. Of this, $98,520.51 was invested in improving the teaching and supervision of the schools; 167 additional teachers were employed to assist in relieving the congested condition of schools here and there and in giving more thorough instructions, and there was a reasonable increase in teacher's salaries, making it possible to get and keep more efficient teachers; $100,977.78 of this amount was expended for building, equipping and expended for building, equipping and repairing schoolhouses. No one can measure the benefits of these well-selected rural libraries, quietly and constantly at work among the well-selected rural inbraries, quiety and constantly at work among the people of the rural districts in the dissemination of general information, the formation of literary taste, the cultivation of the habit of reading and the shaping of higher ideals of char-acter, life and action.

Rural Public High Schools

The Democratic General Assembly of 1907, in recognition of the right of country boys and girls to have an equal chance with city boys and girls, and the right of the poorest to have an equal chance with the richest to develop their higher faculties through a higher course of instruction and develop their higher faculties through a higher course of instruction and thereby secure better preparation for college, for life, for citizenship and service, appropriated $50,000 annually, which was increased to $75,000 in 1911, to encourage the establishment of rural public high schools. The law requires the raising of an amount equal to that received from the state appropriation by the county and the community, respectively, in which the high school is established. During the first year 156 rural public high schools in $1 counties, receiving from $750 to $1,500 each annually for their the first year 156 rural public high schools in $1 counties, receiving from $750 to $1.500 each annually for their support, were established and maintained, enrolling 3,949 pupils with an average duly attendence of 2,965. During last year (1913) there were 208 public high schools in 96 counties, or whom 5,925 whre in regular daily attendance. As indicative of the increased interest in higher education and the popularity of these schools, the applications for them have been largely in excess of the limited appropriation. This shows that the people in the counties are carnest in their desire to obtain the advantages of this new law.
