AN AFTERNOON WITH HAYDN

The first meeting of the St. Cecilia music club was on November 17, at 3:30 in the graded school auditorium. The pupils had the privilege of inviting their mothers, but not many were present on account of inclement weather. After the mothers were seated the pupils marched to their places. The call to order was made by Miss Bulla. Mary Moffitt was decided on as the first president with Miss Auman to act as secretary. Next on the program was a biographical sketch of the musician to be studied during the afternoon—Haydn. This was prepared and read by Grace Presnell. Next a list of his compositions by Cleta Rich. Wilson G. Smith's "Nocturne" was played by Miss Auman.

Reading, "The Telephone," Bessie Kennedy. Clara Bell Morris then told the club about Haydn's greatest oratorio, Tilmont Cox about the name given him by his pupils. The way in which he paid for the tuition was told in an interesting way by Hallie Ross. Miss Lillie Parrish then played a solo which was enjoyed by the entire class.

Roll call was next in order. Everybody responded with an item about Haydn. After this came a contest of fifteen questions concerning Haydn, his life, works, etc. More than twenty pupils were successful, but the prize, a sepia photograph of Haydn, was drawn by McCoy Birkhead.

Miss Bulla then told the class of a three weeks' contest in which improvement in which some of her pupils had worked faithfully. Clara Belle Morris in this work won a prize. Adjournment was next in order, all leaving with a determination to learn as much about hymns as possible before the next meeting, December 1.

MISS BULLA, Pres. MISS AUMAN, Sec.

BALLARD-BRITTAIN

Mr. Basil F. Brittain, of Asheboro and Miss Mary Lorena Ballard, of Mooresville, were married the afternoon of November 12, at Barium Springs, N. C.
