POTASH

is food for thought as well as for crops this year.

When shipments were interrupted by the war, it was estimated that there was enough Potash on hand in the United States to provide two and three per cent Potash in good fertilizer for the spring's trade. Some manufacturers had more than enough for these percentages.

Since then minor sources of Potash have been fully utilized, and additional shipments from the usual source are still being received. The supply is below normal, but this need not prevent farmers securing some Potash in their fertilizers, nor should it lead farmers to decide not to use fertilizers.

There is no reason to return to the out-of-date goods without Potash, although some authorities may try to "wink" them on us. We have not used enough Potash in the past. The largest annual import of Potash was only one-seventeenth of the Potash taken from the soil by our 1914 corn crop and only one-fiftieth of the Potash lost every year in drainage water.

Spring crops use from two to ten times as much Potash as Phosphoric Acid. Get as much Potash in the fertilizer as possible. A few farms are offering to furnish from four to ten per cent. There is no substitute for Potash. It may be harder to get just now, but POTASH PAYS.

PRODUCTION OF EGGS

Poultry Tend to Make Farm Self-Sustaining.

Every Southern Farmer Should Aim to Keep at Least Fifty Hens for Laying Purposes and Home Consumption—Few Essentials.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
The farmer who has a well planned and well cared for garden has gone a long way toward supplying his family with healthy and economical foods. If he adds to the garden a fair size flock of poultry, he will do still more to make his farm self-sustaining.
Early springs and mild winters make the production of eggs particularly profitable for the southern farmer. On many farms throughout the country the money derived from the sale of poultry eggs buys the groceries and clothing for the entire family. Every southern farmer can do as well, and should aim to keep at least fifty hens for laying purposes and home consumption. Select some of the American breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, or the Rhode Island Reds. The Orpingtons are also a good general-purpose breed.

On almost any farm there can be fitted up, with very little, if any, cost for new material, a poultry house that will answer all the purposes of more expensive buildings for keeping poultry. The essentials to success in housing are fresh air, sunshine, a dry floor, and a building that is free from drafts. The house must be free from colds or the birds will catch cold. Colds are forerunners of roup and other diseases.
It takes a healthy, well-fed flock to produce eggs. Fowls must not be allowed to become too fat, as but few eggs will be laid by hens in such condition. To prevent their getting over-fat, it is best to make them work for or buttermilk is excellent for poultry. Green feeds, such as cabbages, mangel beets, alfalfa or clover, should be added to these rations when grass is not available.

Young chickens should be fed from three to five times daily, depending upon one's experience in feeding. Great care must be taken not to over-feed. After they are thirty-six to forty-eight hours old they may be fed.

The first four days contain hard-boiled eggs, Johnnycakes (one dozen infertile eggs to ten pounds of corn meal); add enough milk to make a paste (one and one-half teaspoonful of baking soda, one-half cup of water, one-half cup of rolled oats). Dry bread crumbs or rolled oats may be mixed with hard-boiled eggs, making about one-fourth of the mixture egg. Feed the bread crumbs, rolled oats, or Johnnycakes mixtures five times daily for the first week, then gradually substitute for one or two feeds of the mixture finely cracked grains of equal parts by weight of cracked wheat, cracked corn, and pinhead oatmeal or hulled oats, to which about five per cent of cracked peas or broken rice and two per cent of charcoal, millet, or rape seed may be added. A commercial chick feed may be substituted if desired. The above ration can be fed until the chicks are two weeks old, when they should be placed on grain and a dry or wet mash mixture. Mash mixtures with milk are of considerable value in giving the chickens a good start in life, but the mixtures should be fed in a crumbly mass and not in a sloppy condition.

As soon as the chickens will eat whole wheat, cracked corn, and other grains, the small-sized chick feed can be eliminated. In addition to the above feeds the chickens' growth can be hastened if they are given sour milk, skim milk or buttermilk to drink. Growing chickens kept on range may be given all their feed in a hopper, using as a grain mixture two parts by weight of cracked corn and one part of wheat, and for a mash mixture any of those given for laying hens. If beet scrap is to be fed, it is advisable most of their food by scratching in a litter composed of about four to six of dry straw, leaves, or chaff. The following rations will give good results when proper care is given to their feedings:

Grains: One pound oats, two pounds corn, and Mash: Two pounds bran meal, one pound rice bran or wheat bran, one pound cottonseed meal.

Grains: One pound oats, two pounds corn, and Mash: Two pounds wheat bran, two pounds wheat middlings, two pounds corn meal or corn chips, one and one-half pounds cottonseed meal.

Ten per cent or less of beef scrap may be added to the mash in all the rations with good results. Skim milk to wait until the chicks are ten days old. Chickens confined to small yards should be supplied with green feed, such as radish, sprouted oats, alfalfa or clover, at the best place to raise chickens successfully is on a good range where no extra green feed is required.

Wintering Brood Sow.

Keep the brood sow in good, thrifty and healthy condition. Allow her plenty of exercise. Feed her green food in the winter. She is very fond of alfalfa hay and mangel beets with one feed per day of middlings and milk. Give her a dry, comfortable straw bed, also plenty of fresh water, and she will winter in prime condition.

Good Car Bedding

Shredded corn fodder or rye straw provide good bedding for the hog car.
