TRINITY NEWS

Prominent Citizen Stricken With Paralysis—Visitors in Town.

On last Friday morning, our whole community was much shocked to learn that Mr. J. J. White, one of our most useful and popular citizens, had been stricken with paralysis. At the present writing, we are glad to say, he seems to be resting comfortably, and some hope is entertained that he will perhaps be up and about again.

As chairman of the board of stewards, church trustee, Sunday school superintendent, teacher of the Bible class, leader in the Junior Order, postmaster, friend and neighbor, Mr. White has always been faithful to duty. For nearly fifty years, he has lived here, and has been recognized as one who stood for what he believed to be right. Born and reared in dear old Randolph, he is another one of her sons, whose Christian life and honorable stand for true Christian manhood we feel proud of, God grant that he be in his usual health soon.

Messrs. W. F. Ellis, Sr. and Jr. and H. H. Hayes, of High Point, spent Sunday at home.

Miss Brown, secretary of the "Lead a Hand Society," of Boston, Mass., visited the Trinity high school last Friday, and was the guest of Mrs. W. F. Ellis while here. Miss Brown expressed herself as being delighted with North Carolina, and especially with the proverbial hospitality, the intelligent looking and interesting school children, the fine courtesy of the school principal, and the general educational outlook. All who heard Miss Brown were much pleased with her.

Master Munay Ballance, of High Point, spent the week-end with his grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Ballance.

Prof. Henry Craven, superintendent of the New Bern schools, spent the week-end with his brother, Mr. Bruce Craven. He was out at Sunday school and made an interesting talk.

Mr. Earl Craven, of Lexington, spent a few hours in town last Sunday.

Mrs. Alva English, of Hillsboro; Mrs. Dr. Campbell, of Philadelphia;

Spurgeon White, of Greensboro; and John White, of Greensboro, are at the bedside of their father, Mr. J. J. White.

Miss Jewel Parkin is in Thomasville, visiting her sister, Mrs. Edgar Pepper.

Miss Nell Parkin spent part of last week in Greensboro, assisting in a recital that was given at the State Normal. We are quite sure her assistance added much to the occasion, as Miss Nell has a lovely voice.

Prof. Johnson, who is constantly introducing features for the advancement of the Sunday school, now has the various classes undertake to apply the lesson. This is a fine incentive to study.

The sixth and seventh grades will give an entertainment Saturday night, April 3rd, which will consist of a "Cantata" and a play, "Out in the Streets." The proceeds for the benefit of the school.

NEWS FROM CRAVEN HEIGHTS, FRANKLINVILLE

I. S. Wallace, of Rockingham, was in town last week, and rented his home on Fairmount street to E. B. Craven. Mr. Wallace will probably move to his farm next fall. He has had the buildings improved and expects to have the residence painted this summer.

Rev. D. A. Highfill will fill his regular appointments at Fairmount M. P. church, Sunday, March 28, morning and night.

W. C. Slack expects to erect a new barn on his lot on Sunset street, soon.

W. C. Jones exchanged his fine Jersey cow for another one equally as fine.

Sank Lindsay has been improving his residence on his farm.

Two citizens, desiring to behold some of the beauty and grandeur of nature, last Sunday evening, strolled out into the forest, and down to the banks of Deep River. After drinking in to the satisfying of their souls and heart's content, some of the grandeur produced by the warm sun of a March day, and being cheered and comforted by the melodious songs of the birds, and occasionally plucking a tiny flower, they meandered back to the road. Proceeding homeward, they accidentally discovered a package and having a desire to know what it contained they proceeded at once to examine it. To their surprise, it contained inside its clear crystal housing, the fluid extract of fermented sugar, and desiring to test it, because it was beautiful to look upon and calculated to make one "rich" they opened the crystal container, and its odor was so inviting they proceeded at once to satisfy their appetites. The effects were severe. They soon succumbed to the deadly grasp and sank down to the earth, remaining there in an unconscious state until discovered by some passing children, who informed the neighbors, who quickly responded to the call and rushed to the scene of affliction, doing all they could to relieve and restore the unconscious victims. After hours of intense suffering and when agonizing groans began to cease and their stomachs could no longer retain the strange substances received therein, the victims began to improve, and with the assistance of friends were able to reach their homes. We hope they will soon be able to resume the responsibility devolving upon them as parents and that the past will prove a blessing to them.
