POSTAL SERVICE RECORD GOOD

The administration of the Postoffice Department during the Wilson regime has been better than it ever was be fore. The postal service has been greatly improved under Mr. Burleson.

The Democrats have gotten closer to the people, and brought the produc er of food supplies closer to the con-sumer. In that way the movement from the farm to the table has grown Assistant Postmaster General, Daniel C. Roper, who by marriage and col-lege training is a North Carolinian, by birth South Carolinian, was re-cently asked the following questions:

"Has the Department brought about closer relations between the producer and the consumer of foodstuffs through the parcel post?"

"The farm-to-table feature of the parcel post has received special attention," answered Mr. Roper.

On being asked if the postal service is on a better basis now than when the Democrats took charge, he said: "The present year has brought a large falling off in postal revenue, due to ropean war, and the consequent deficit is not an indication of imper fect administration. The amount of the deficit, however, is much smaller than it would have been if the mos strenuous efforts had not been made to reduce expenditures so far as pratically consistent with good service.

ENGLAND OWNS CENTURY OLD SECRET WEAPON

Great Britain has in reserve a weap on of war which she has not yet dare to use, but which if she should use not only the present war but war for all time would be ended. It is spoken of as "Dunonald's Destroyer." a few highly placed persons know what this weapon is.

She was on the point of using it against Napoleon and again in the Crimean war, but both times her rulto "shock humanity." But if the worn should come to the worst she may draw it from its century old hiding place, and the most ghastly horrors yet known in warfare will seem hu-mane in comparison with it. It was invented by Thomas Cochrane, tentl earl of Dunonald, who twice offered it to the British Government. A com-mittee was twice appointed to pass upon it. They reported that his de-vice was irresistable and infallible either on land or sea. They urged however, that it not be adopted, as it was too efficient, too destructive, that its devastation would be too inhuman.

Dunonald died in 1860. His plans are still in the archives of the British war office, and it is possible that should the war take a turn disastrou to Great Britain, it may be brought out and made the final weapon in an war, and not merely the present war but war for all time; as with all the world in possession of a device with which armies and fleets and fortress es could be annihilated in an hour, a device so simple that anyone seeing it once could put it into practice, no nation would ever dare make war. War on such terms would mean anni hilation for victor as well as vanquish

The question is: Will Great Britain dare to shock humanity by bringing this monstrous device out to annihi-late her enemy and so forever put an
