

POTASH AND SMALL GRAIN FARMERS.

By C. B. Williams.

For fertilizing purposes, it seems practically certain that potash salts will not be available this year for use on fall crops, because of the unsettled conditions now prevailing in Europe. This being true, the small grain farmers of the State as well as throughout the South generally are beginning to inquire around and among themselves as to what they are to do without potash in their fertilizer mixtures, as they have in many cases used, heretofore, fertilizers containing as much as two to five per cent. of this constituent.

In our study of soils of the Piedmont and mountain sections of this State, which soils are largely typical of those of the greater portion of the small grain growing section of the South, it has been found that potash is present in the surface six inches of soil, in most cases, in sufficient quantities to supply the growth of maximum crops of grain for a hundred years or more. It is, therefore, with these soils more of a problem of making the supply already present, available than of increasing it. Not only do the chemical analyses show this, but in only one case have we found any marked increase in yield of small grains due to its use. Frequently the yields have appeared to have been actually reduced. Generally, it would give better immediate returns and would be far more beneficial to eliminate potash altogether for mixtures for small grains grown on these soils, and put the money into an additional supply of phosphoric acid. Although the supply of this constituent is liberal, this does not mean that potash could not be used profitably on some other crops that might be grown on these soils, for such would not be borne out by our field results. Growers of wheat, oats, and rye on average soils in the Piedmont and mountain sections of the South may use fertilizers this fall, containing something like ten per cent available phosphoric acid and three to five per cent of nitrogen and expect to get good yields, if they are properly put in and seasonal conditions are at all favorable. For the growing of oats and rye (wheat is not generally recommended for growth on the sandy soils of the Coastal Plain Region) this fall, where potash is far more essential to be added the soils will have to have crops or crop plowed under and manure applied in order that the crops may the better get at the reserve potash supply that may be present in the soil, in a more or less unavailable form. As potash salts too in all probability will not be available for next year's crops, wood ashes, tobacco stems, and other refuse potash-bearing materials, should be carefully saved by those farmers who have them, from exposure to the weather and be used next year on crops like tobacco, potatoes, and clover, which will be the ones in greatest need of applications of available potash.

This is especially important for those whose farms are in the Coastal Plain Region. Remember that with Piedmont and Mountain soils, with few exceptions, phosphoric acid is of chief importance in growing small grains, nitrogen coming next year. For those who wish to mix their own fertilizers, phosphoric acid may be obtained from acid phosphate or basic slag; and nitrogen may be derived from cotton seed meal, dried blood, tankage, fish scrap, nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia and farm manure. No doubt, however, those manufacturing commercial fertilizers will be in a position to supply mixtures of the approximate grade (10-3 to 5) mentioned above and it may be cheaper or more satisfactory to buy them already mixed. In using the commercial carrier of nitrogen, it will generally be found best to use the organic farms like the first four mentioned above, reserving nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia to be used in the spring, if needed to promote growth as a top dressing. Particularly is this important with soils that are not of a retentive nature.

EGG PLANT RECIPE.

By the first of September most of us are tired of beans, potatoes, tomatoes, and other summer vegetables, and the housekeepers are wishing for a change in the vegetables they serve on their tables. How many of you have tried "egg-plant?" There are many ways of preparing these vegetable eggs. The simplest of all being this way: pare the eggs, cut in slices and soak in salt water for an hour, then dip in corn meal, salt and pepper and fry in fat to a deep brown color. Serve at once. This is a most delicious dish and reminds one of fresh fish or fried chicken.

Malaria or Chills & Fever
Prescription No. 995 is prepared especially for MALARIA or CHILLS & FEVER. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken as a tonic the fever will not return. It acts on the liver better than Colocyn and does not grip or sicken. 25c

REV. DR. BROUGHTON PRAISES WILSON

Rev. L. G. Broughton, born, reared and educated in North Carolina, and who was pastor of the leading Baptist church in Atlanta, and for several years, until recently pastor of the great church in London which Charles H. Spurgeon was once pastor, in a recent sermon declared:

Germany to have exalted salvation by character, and the failure of such teaching in churches, he said, will be the forerunner of a failure on the part of Germany's policy. He also declared that operatives in factories in America ought of right to be given a share of increased profits growing out of the making of war munitions, or of making anything the value of which has been increased by the war. He said that strikes naturally were to be deprecated, but that when they came it were well to inquire if the workmen should not have their demands.

"Many lines of industry," he went on, "are growing rich out of this war, and they should see to it that as far as right they divide their fortunes with those who help to make it for them—the working men. This is nothing but right. It costs them more to live than before the war and they are entitled to some of the spoils."

The doctor said America had learned a great lesson from the war, and continued:

"The greatest lesson American has learned is the discovery of the sacredness of American citizenship. With the slaughter of our people on the high seas while enjoying their privileges under international law, there went up from the Capitol of the Nation a shriek of the American eagle that shook the world."

"No longer will any nation look upon us as merely a Nation of dollar chasers while our rights are being disregarded and our people are being put to death. The final word of protest that went from our able, just and judicious President last Thursday with regard to such disregard of our rights has done more for us than any one word that the Nation has ever spoken. It has stamped American citizenship in letters of unflinching glory. It has shown the world that around every American citizen, great and small, there are the Stars and Stripes to guard and protect him. It has made it mean more to us, and to the world, to be an American citizen, than any word of any other man since the birth of the Nation."

Says Germany Will Be Irritated.
"We do not want war. We are not going to have it if we can help it, but Americans are going to stand together as one man for the right of our people at all cost, realizing that 'he who provideth not for his own household hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel.'"

MR. HARTNESS OF IREDELL

Mr. J. A. Hartness, who has been clerk of the Superior Court of Iredell county for the past sixteen years, is spending the day here. His long term of service is indicative of his fidelity and ability as an official. He has been faithful over a few things and his friends up in Iredell and on west want to put him in charge of greater things, hence they are putting him forward for Secretary of State to be considered in the next State Democratic Convention. He has a substantial following in the western counties where he has done much for the promotion of Democratic success and harmony, and his friends are anxious for his promotion in recognition of his service, and of his fine ability and excellent qualifications to discharge the duties of the office of Secretary of State.—Alamance Gleaner.

HIGH POINT M. P. CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

The High Point Enterprise tells of the 20th anniversary of North Main M. P. church in High Point, the initiatory steps being taken by Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, a Randolph county boy. He went to High Point August 15, 1894, and Major W. P. Pickett made the first subscription, and the second was by J. C. Welch.

He worked faithfully on the subscription list from that date to September 20, 1895, when the church was dedicated and all bills were paid in full.

The pastors have been: Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, five years; Rev. Wm. Porter, three years; Rev. J. S. Williams, one year; Rev. C. L. Whitaker, D. D., two years; Rev. J. D. Williams, two years; and Rev. A. G. Dixon, now in his seventh year, making only six pastors in twenty years.

Major W. P. Pickett has acted as secretary and treasurer of the church since its organization and has been able to pay all incidental bills.

Rev. Mr. Lowdermilk preached the twentieth anniversary sermon last Sunday to the delight and uplift of his hearers.
