

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

Florence Nightingale, best known for her work in the camp hospitals during the Crimean War, when she revolutionized army nursing, was born in Florence, Italy, May 15, 1820. Her father, William Shore Nightingale, was a wealthy English landowner and a country gentleman of the old school, known as "Squire," with estates in Derbyshire and Hampshire, so Florence Nightingale was born to wealth and position, and every avenue to social distinction lay open to her. As a young girl she showed a kindly interest in the sick, especially the very poor among them.

Her attention was early drawn to the backward and unsanitary condition of London hospitals; she traveled extensively on the continent of Europe to make a special study of such institutions, entering upon a course of training in nursing with the Sisters of Mercy in Paris and at Kaiserswerth-on-Rhine, which occupied fourteen years of her life. When the Crimean war was in progress, in response to something like a national appeal, she left England with a band of nurses she had mostly trained, and established the great hospital at Scutari, where by her untiring energy and extraordinary ability in alleviating the suffering of the sick and wounded she acquired a world-wide reputation. The English people desired to present her with a testimonial, and fifty thousand pounds sterling ($250,000) were raised, but she only accepted this on condition that she might use it to found a hospital and the Nightingale Home at St. Thomas' Hospital, London, was accordingly founded. She wrote "Notes on Hospitals," "Notes on Nursing," "Life or Death in India," and some other books on kindred subjects. She died August 13, 1910.

Longfellow pays a tribute to this heroic woman in his poem entitled "Santa Flomenna,"

"The wounded from the battle-plain,
In dreary hospitals of pain,
The cheerless corridors,
The cold and stony floors.

"Lo! in that house of misery
A lady with a lamp I see
Pass through the glimmering
gleam,
And flit from room to room.

"And slow, as in a dream of bliss,
The speechless sufferer turns to kiss
Her shadow as it falls
Upon the darkening walls.

"On England's annals through the
Hereafter of her speech and song,
That night it rays shall cast
From portals of the past.

"A lady with a lamp shall stand
In the great history of the land
A noble type of good
Heroic womanhood."

TAXATION AS A REMEDY FOR ABSENTEE LANDLORDISM.

I remarked last week that sooner or later the South will undoubtedly adopt some plan whereby the resident landowner—the man who lives on his place and helps build up the community and every form of wholesome community life—will be taxed at a lower rate (at least on his best 100 acres) than is the absentee landlord who too often either takes no interest at all in the community life or actually retards its development.

The shameful fact at present is however, that instead of having to pay an extra tax for holding back the progress of the community the average absentee landlord in the South gets off lighter than industrious, enterprising, resident farmers who keep up soil fertility, build good houses, keep good livestock, and help everything look progressive and be progressive. "Mr. Absentee Landlord's place," say the tax assessors, "is running down, the land is getting poor and partly growing up in old fields, and the Negro tenants have let his house get in ramshackle shape; so we naturally can't increase his assessment. But here is young John Jones; his land's getting richer, he has fixed up his place and is making some money; we'll have to run up on him."

Instead of all this, it would seem that in fixing an assessment on land, the rule ought to be to assess on its natural value. What justice is there in punishing a man with increased taxes he has helped the State and helped coming generations by taking care of his soil and making it richer and more fruitful and beautiful? And on the other hand, is it not State to reward a man with lightened taxation because he has neglected his land, letting it wash into waste and gullies to the infinite loss of present and future generations?—Progressive Farmer.

INSTRUCTING THE UNINSTRUCTED

If Senator Penrose knows what he is talking about, and he thinks he does, delegates to the National Republican Convention next year will go uninstructed as to candidates. In the impending crisis he solemnly believes that the office should seek the man. To that end he assumes that uninstructed delegates "will be able to weigh the merits and strength of each aspirant and by a process of elimination make a proper selection."

In such circumstances most of us know how the weighing and eliminating will be done and who will preside at the ceremonies. There will be gathered together in a superheated parlor of a Chicago hotel, far from the madding crowd of delegates, a few choice spirits of the old regime. Mr. Penrose will be there, of course, and so will Joe Cannon and a dozen others, and in the dark of the moon they will weigh and eliminate until the final unanimous choice of the thousand uninstructed delegates will make up the convention next day will be fixed unalterably, as if by revelation, upon some good corporation candidate almost miraculously raised up for the occasion.

Instructed delegates representing the will of the people in important States cannot fail to be troublesome in such a situation as this, for they will want to be heard and, worst of all, to be counted. A Presidential primary legally binding could hardly be more reprehensible or better calculated to interfere with the ancient processes.—New York World.

WHAT A PROMINENT REPUBLICAN SAYS

The Raleigh correspondent of the Durham Herald recently had this item:

"Woodrow Wilson had as well make President for another term by acclamation," declared a prominent Republican here who held an important federal appointment for a couple of terms under former Republican administrations. He explained his assertion by saying that Wilson has scored such a complete success in the diplomatic relations of the United States during these perilous times that it will not be worth while for any opposition to his re-election to be organized. This Republican is also free to admit that the overwhelming strength of President Wilson all over the country will assure to Democracy a firm hold on the reins of government for another term and, indeed, is likely to bring about decided gains out in the States as well as in Federal officialdom.

INFANT MORTALITY

Statistics carefully collected by the United States government show us that, of every 1,000 babies born each year, 127 die before the next year comes; and, of these 127 annual deaths per thousand, it is freely admitted that a large percentage are easily preventable.

Babies vs. Calves.

If, out of every 1,000 calves, 127 should die the first year, and statistics should show such a loss as that year after year throughout the country, a storm of indignation would rise at the lax methods of inspection that would permit so costly a mortality; but considered purely from the value in dollars and cents, the waste of child-life is a question that demands the attention of every man who loves his kind and wants to see this country greater and more prosperous. To measure human life in dollars may be a brutal way of putting the question of health preservation; it may be startling; but it enables us to contrast the care we give to our domestic animals with that which we fail to give our own children.—Postal Life Insurance Bulletin.—North Carolina Health Bulletin.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Asheboro Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Asheboro, but a number of citizen testify. Endorsements by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills:

S. W. Presnell, liveryman, S. Fayetteville St., Asheboro, says: "I used to have had spells with my back and kidneys pained too freely at times, then again they were congested. I felt restless and nervous and had dizzy spells. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for ten years when I have had these attacks and have always found them just as represented, getting quick relief. When a cold affects my kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills never fail to help me right away."

CANDIDATE HARTNESS

Charlotte Observer. Keeping an eye on the papers of the State the past week. The Observer has been impressed with the intensity of interest the announcement of Mr. J. A. Hartness, of Iredell, for the office of Secretary of State has aroused. It is clearly evident that there is more behind the candidacy of Hartness than mere leadership for the rotationists. His name is the talk in all the counties. The Winston-Salem Journal does not hesitate to give him cordial recommendation, which is rounded out with the expression that it "is glad to see him thus early announce his candidacy, along with his intention to make a straightforward campaign." The Journal says that by doing this, Mr. Hartness "is rendering his ends throughout the State a distinct service, since there are thousands of them who will be delighted to have an opportunity to express their appreciation of his faithful work for the party in a substantial manner." The concern the rotationists have been manifesting in Hartness' probable course seems to have been fully justified.

RANDOLPH PROSPERS

We have just had an opportunity to take a look into Randolph county. It has wonderful possibilities. Rich soil, beautiful in situation and in most cases well cultivated. There is much of it still lying waste, however, and some of it is poorly tended. They say hay grows well in the county. If that is so why is there so much baled hay wire visible?

Asheboro.

Asheboro is the busy center and a fast growing town. There is an alertness among the people there worth watching. Their school building, built new only a short time ago, while too large when built is now altogether too small. The teachers are wide awake and eager to do their level best. We are looking for much good news all through the county radiating from Asheboro.—University News Letter.

BEAUTIFUL DAY

Beautiful day to be dreaming in,
Beautiful day to be borne—
Laughing and singing and gleaming in
Unto the valleys of morn!
Beautiful day, with its calm and sweet;
Beautiful day overhead, under feet;
Beautiful day in country and town,
Beautiful day to be wandering down
Out of our dusty and different toil
Unto the sweet of the beautiful soil.

Beautiful day to be bright and true,
Beautiful day to be loving you;
Beautiful day to be happy and bright—
One with the spirit and touch of the light,
Off in the spell of the lane and the stream.

Out in the beautiful glow of the dream
Beautiful day to hope and trust,
Beautiful day to look up from the dust,
Seeing and knowing afar and near
The light of love's innocent beauty and cheer.

Beautiful day to be doing things,
Beautiful day to be taking wings
Over the bustle and rumble of life,
Out of the terror and tumult of strife;
Beautiful day to be off to play
In the greenwood sweet of the beautiful
May;

Happy and careless, and knowing again
The ancient and Orphean gladder of men,
Down through the tunnel and up
through the hollow
Pan with his pipes, and old Bacchus, to follow—
Beautiful day for the old life and new
Under the beautiful hue of the blue.
—The Bentstone Bard.

WHEN DADDY WAS A BOY

When twilight comes, my daddy takes
Me up upon his knee,
And tells me of the things he did
When he was young, like me;
How maple sugar, cooled with snow,
His appetite would cloy;
Gee, but they must 'a had good times
When Daddy was a boy!

He had to pass a haunted house
When coming home from school,
Where trees grew all around the edge
Of some black, swampy pool,
An' once they thought they saw a ghost—
He and my uncle Roy—
Gee, but they must 'a had good times
When Daddy was a boy!

O' course, he had to do the chores,
And had to bring in wood,
And then, when Christmas came around,
He'd get, if he was good,
A pair of shoes, or a new hat,
Instead of any toy—
But, anyhow, they had good times,
When Daddy was a boy.

My Daddy wasn't any saint;
From school he'd sneak away,
And hunt wild injuns in the woods,
Just like we do today;
He used to go barefooted, too;
Green apples he'd enjoy—
I guess times hasn't changed much since
My Daddy was a boy.

PLANT FRUIT TREES.

There is a growing sentiment throughout the land to plant more fruit trees and the idea is good and should be encouraged. Nothing adds more to the comforts and pleasures of the home than good fruit. The farmer with but a few acres of land may have an abundance of fruit with very little expense, however the more attention given the trees will assure a better yield and larger results. The farm without an abundance of fruit is in reality short of much which would give pleasure and profit to the owner. Several small orchards are found in and around on the hills of Carthage, and the owners have found them to be remunerative indeed. Just the past season the peach crop was good, and prices were fair and the fruit growers are encouraged to plant more trees and branch out some. We understand that the peaches netted around $1.50 per crate, and when it is taken into consideration that several thousand crates were shipped from the county it is easy to see that some money was made. It is not safe to count upon a good crop every year, therefore disappointments are sure to come sometimes and the wise man will diversify and not put all of his eggs in one basket.

KEEPING OUR SCHOOL CHILDREN WELL.

No boy or girl likes to be sick. Neither do grown-ups, for that matter. There are some kinds of disease that we can do much to avoid; others, there is nothing much that we can do in the way of protection.

Among those diseases that boys and girls can do a great deal to avoid are diphtheria, scarlet fever, and measles. All of these are highly contagious, "catching" as we often say, and for the most part are conveyed from one person to another by the matter that comes from the nose, throat or mouth.

Now, if the school children of North Carolina could all be taught about these three diseases alone, and then these few simple directions followed, they in large part would be able to avoid having diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles.

Here they are: Keep away from children who are suffering with severe colds, complain of sore throats, and who say they don't feel well. Without being rude or unkind, you need not play with them or exchange gum, candy, fruit or food of any kind.

Do not borrow or lend pencils at any time; and never put even your own pencil in your mouth.

Use your own drinking cup.

Do not visit playgrounds where are not well; they may be coming down with any one of the diseases that we are talking about, and, as a rule, the early stages are the most dangerous.

Do not go into any house, where there is a warning sign posted on the outside. The only safe rule is not to expose yourself knowingly. Take no chances.—Adapted from the Chicago Department of Health, in the N. C. Health Bulletin.

How To Prevent Croup.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Sol by all druggists.

SEED CORN WILL BE HIGH PRICED.

Director C. R. Littlow, of the West Virginia Agricultural Extension Department, after having toured the agricultural sections of eleven of the big corn-producing states, says that good seed corn will be scarce and high-priced next spring. A cool late spring and the excessive rainfall delayed the corn crop in these states so that the larger part of it did not mature before frost.

Farmers are urged to select their seed corn in the field. Field selection enables the farmer to pick out good ears that have grown under normal conditions. It also enables him to avoid taking ears from hills containing barren stalks and has many other advantages.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it.
