Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

To Sunday School Workers

To the Sunday school workers and all who are interested in the Belgian children:

We have confronting us one of the most blessed privileges we have ever had. I hesitate to say duty, because when you and I see a child starving and with a small amount of $1.00 per month can keep that child from disease and starvation, I feel that I have a great privilege of making a contribution.

I want to appeal to the officers of each township and superintendents of each school also teachers of every class in the county to give all you can. We may never see the result here. Eternity only will reveal the good we have done in this and I like the idea of doing things that we can't hope to get any physical return and that we cannot know what good it has done.

And to start off the county the Baraca class, Liberty M. E. church, gives $12.00 to keep one child in growing condition; James H. Johnson, $12; Mrs. D. M. Sharpe, $12; Mr. C. P. Smith, $5, all from Liberty M. E. church.

I feel, Sunday schools folks, as president of your association, that I would like to bring this matter to your attention and have sent on the $12 from the Baraca class, and any class or individual who will give to this cause may send amount to me and I will send on to the Belgian children's fund. Yours to do all we can to help the work.

D. M. SHARPE.

Belgium; and then he added: "Within six weeks, I have visited a station in the slums of Brussels where 1,500 children are fed daily. The children were sitting down to their meal, and when they saw me they rose and feebly sang the first stanza of 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' Now, knowing that the food-supply was not American, I could feel nothing but shame."

Mr. Hoover is now in this country, seeking to arouse such a sentiment and inspire such a purpose as will make America's bounty match her boasted munificence and worthy Belgian belief. Quoting him, the New York Times well says, and asks:

"If Mr. Hoover, whose administration of the Commission for the Relief of Belgium has been, perhaps, the most splendid American achievement of the last two years, could feel nothing but shame when that American song was sung by Belgian children whom the Commission has fed, what should the rest of us feel?"

"This relief," says Mr. Hoover, "has come to be America's greatest exhibit in Europe. We want to give a demonstration of that great humanity which we know runs through our people."

The Literary Digest's readers have responded nobly—so far as they have responded at all; but we have heard from less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of them. In one week the Belgian Children's Fund has jumped from $75,000 to $150,000, and this is encouraging—yes, inspiring. But even at this rate it will take three months or more to get that million dollars. And millions more will be needed.

Concert of action must win the goal. It should begin at once, in a way to let whole communities share in the benefaction. Why may not the people of your town undertake a proposition and make a pledge to care for the hungry children of some town in Belgium, especially designated? That would give your entire townpeople a local interest in one particular neighborhood. It would almost personalize their gifts.

The people of Lancaster, Pa., under leadership of the enterprising publishers of the New Era, undertook to do this very thing just one week before this item is written. They said to us: "Yes, we will with pleasure take care of St. Croix and its eight hundred needy little ones, and we will gladly raise $9,600 for this purpose."

And to show that they meant business, they went right to work with determination of doing it, as evidenced by the announcement in the tabulation of cash below, showing a remittance of $4,000 already, or nearly one-half the amount they are to raise. And the New Era's managing editor wrote:

"Never in the history of charity movements in this community have the people responded more promptly and generously than to this Belgian appeal, first presented to our readers through the courtesy of The Literary Digest. The first day's appeal brought us considerably over $1,500. The New Era has in the last two years aided in raising several different war-sufferers' funds, but from none of them have we had such magnificent results as from the present one. It seems to have struck deep into the hearts of our people, the tots dragged from the bread line because they looked too well fed, the children forced to sleep at the tables where they are served with their porridge rations, and the pitiable pleas for food from the emaciated children, have touched them deeply, and it would not be surprising to see the Lancaster fund grow to at least $10,000. One of the most remarkable features of the movement is the very large number of new names found on our contribution list—persons who have not been in the habit of giving to these war-charities—and they come from all walks of life."

There are hundreds of such communities in the United States, and all that is necessary in each one is a leader. There must be among the people in your town many men and women of spirit akin to that of one woman who signed herself "A Widow with a small income," who wrote:

"I had said to myself, I will give $5 a month for Belgian relief, if I can. I sent it now, for fear sickness or some other need might get in," and her remittance of $60 was enclosed, while she added: "Surely at least a million American will give $5 a month or more, as they can. I would like to be one of a million so to pledge myself."

A traveling man sends his check for $12, reminds us that there are several thousand like him in this country, and says that if they can be reached "not one will turn down" our appeal. Can you reach one? The Mountain States Lumber Dealers' Association, in convention assembled at Denver, unanimously resolved that each member on the 1st Monday in the month of February, March, April, May, and June, will contribute to the Belgian Children's Fund 5 per cent of his gross sales of merchandise for that day, and will use his best efforts to secure like action from every non-member lumber dealer in his respective State. A long telegram told of this action, so characteristic of the generous West.—Literary Digest.
