Commissioners Are Busy With Business Of County Interest

Many Minor Matters Come Before Body As They Sit In Official Session Monday

County Notes Are Renewed For Time

Will Hold Adjourned Session On November 11th, In Afternoon For Unfinished Business

The November meeting of the board of county commissioners was held on Monday at the court house in Asheboro with a full attendance and considerable business before the body. Various items of small business, such as the revoking of peddler's license and the repayment of some cash to Mrs. Cyrus Allred, by error of the equalization board, were disposed of at this meeting.

It was ordered by the board that the county accept $26.50 as full payment for five acres of land listed in the name of J. C. Kearns, colored, and sold under that name for non-payment of taxes and that deed be made to W. T. Cashatt who agreed to pay the 1935 taxes, but taxes for the years 1932, 1933 and 1934 be released.

Mrs. Emily Nelson was ordered the payment of $5.00 per month, for two months for keeping the two children of George Simmons.

It was also decided by the board to discontinue the renting of space in the corridors of the county court house. This practice will be discontinued on December 1st.

The renewal and a partial payment on some of the county's notes consumed some time at this meeting. The note for $46,000.00 was renewed until the 1st day of January, 1936 and to be signed by the chairman of the board of commissioners—to bear 4 per cent interest. Sufficient taxes have not been collected to make a large payment on this note, therefore the necessity of extra borrowing and renewal.

The board adjourned, after the selection of jurors for the coming term of December court, to hold a call meeting on November 11th.

The juror list follows:

Jurors For First Week
J. W. Hill, Asheboro Township; T. A. Hinchaw, Randleman Township; H. C. Lanier, Tabernacle Township; O. L. Lednum, Columbia Township; D. L. Moody, Columbia Township; J. W. Williams, Coleridge Township; John J. Leonard, Columbia Township;

Mr. Powell comes to Asheboro from the Marion First Methodist church after a most successful stay of four years. Echoes from Marion, as well as press reports, indicate sincere regret from several sources at the loss of the Powells from the church and town.

Rev. Mr. Powell was educated at Duke University, Asbury college and Emery, being admitted into the Western North Carolina Conference in 1924. He has served three churches during his ministry, at Spray, Murphy and Marion. Because of his outstanding work this minister was during this year recommended by Dr. J. J. D. Hall, Episcopal minister of New York City, to be included in "Who's Who in the Clergy," a catalog of the outstanding ministers of America in all churches. During his four year's pastorate in Marion, the church membership was increased by 195 members, which is an unusually large record.

Rev. Mr. Powell has an interesting family, his wife and a small son, Howard, Jr. Mrs. Powell was, before her marriage in 1926, Miss Eunice Claire Rich of Graham. The family was most popular socially in Marion as well as well liked within the circles of the church.

Many Interesting Historical Facts Come To Light As Old Subscribers Send In Letters

Some time ago The Courier staged a questionnaire to find out how many old subscribers there were on the list who had been taken the paper continuously. Several interesting incidents and recollections of days before The Courier was The Courier, but named The Regulator, were brought to light in this fashion. Names of people who were well known in Randolph county many years ago, but who are long since dead, have been called to mind and we mention several of these for the information of our readers.

R. F. Keerans of 338 South Main street, High Point, writes that he has heard his father, Rev. I. F. Keerans say time and again that he subscribed for the first paper that was published in Asheboro. He says, "He kept up his subscription as long as he lived."

He was 78 years old when he died on February 7th, 1907. I have taken it ever since." This appears to give Mr. Keerans the two-year additional subscription to The Courier.

W. R. Lassiter, of Randleman route one, while in Asheboro recently, called at The Courier office and renewed his subscription for another year. Mr. Lassiter said that his father, the late B. H. Lassiter subscribed for The Courier, which was then the Randolph Regulator, more than seventy years ago and that a copy of the paper had been coming into their home ever since. Mr. Lassiter said he had been a subscriber himself for thirty-six years.

For the 1935 season, more than a thousand dahlias and around 100,000 gladioli were planted and Mrs. Hinchaw states that they expect to double their outdoor planting for the coming year.

The Courier Is Offering Most Unusual Compensation To Those Who Care To Cooperate In Plan

Today, in a full-page spread, The Courier is announcing a group of valuable premiums that will be featured in a drive for new subscriptions in the county that begins now and ends on Friday, December 20.

This subscription campaign is an event in celebration of the attainment of an already large circulation, and a drive for even more subscribers in which these gifts will be distributed to citizens of this vicinity in exchange for their spare time.

We are trying to make this proposition more attractive and inviting than anything ever offered before of this nature. No expense has been spared in selecting the premiums for this campaign. We are using quality premiums on surprisingly small conditions.

This is not a popularity contest, or anything of the sort, in which there is an element of chance for a first, second third prize. The proposition is strictly open and clear, and those who assist in the drive know in advance the simple and easy conditions to be met in order to obtain the premium desired. There is no limit to the premiums—as many of each premium may be had as participants desire.

A hundred Randolph county families should share in the distribution of these gifts before the campaign closes on December 20. Seldom does an opportunity of this kind arise.

Judge J. J. Hayes Will Speak In Asheboro On Sunday Morning, Nov. 10

Prominent Jurist Will Speak At Baptist Church At 11:00 O'clock Service

Baptist Church Is Yet Without Minister

Well Known Preachers And Laymen Have Spoken Since Former Pastor's Departure

The Asheboro Baptist church will bring a speaker of wide interest to Asheboro on Sunday morning, November 10th when Judge Johnson J. Hayes appears in the pulpit of that church. For several weeks, the supply committee from this church has endeavored to secure Judge Hayes for a service in the absence of a regular pastor for the church.

Judge Hayes, for many years holding a position on the bench of the federal courts of North Carolina, is well known for his stand for prohibition and temperance. Whether or not this will be his topic for Sunday, the Judge has not announced, but suffice it to say that he will be the speaker at this 11:00 a. m. service in the Baptist church. Many people in this county who heard his talks during the fight for prohibition in the state, will embrace the opportunity to hear the Judge on this occasion.

From time to time, since Dr. Stevens left for his new pastorate, the Baptist church has been filling the pulpit with interesting speakers and ministers of note. Last Sunday, at both the morning and evening services, Rev. N. M. Harrison of High Point college, was the guest minister. The Sunday before, Judge Wayland Cooke, of Greensboro, was the speaker at the morning service and made a broadly interesting talk. Prior to that time, Rev. Mr. Harrison had preached for this congregation and is considered a general favorite with the local group.

Dr. Herman Stevens pastor the Asheboro Baptist church, resigned around two months ago and accepted the pastorate of Orcutt Avenue Baptist church in Newport News, Va., where he and his family have recently gone. This leaves the pulpit of the church vacant with a committee looking about for a minister who would be equipped and acceptable to serve the local church. No announcement from the committee comes at present concerning filling the pulpit, but they issue an invitation to the people of Asheboro to hear Judge Hayes on Sunday morning.

County Farm Debt Adjustment Group In Beneficial Meet

The Randolph County Farm Debt Adjustment Committee met Friday at the local rehabilitation office in Asheboro, with B. M. Brower, chairman, presiding. All members were present except Bruce Craven, of Trinity. D. W. McPherson, district representative, was present, as were Miss Lena E. Bullard, home economist, E. H. Anderson, supervisor of rehabilitation in this district, which is composed of Guilford and Randolph counties. Mr. Little, Federal Loan Bank contact man was also present.

In addition to the thirty three adjustments reported, at the last meeting, which meant a savings of more than five thousand dollars to Randolph farmers, other cases were considered, and it is the hope and belief of the committee that further, and efficient service can be rendered the farmers of this section. Miss Bullard finds that many of those who have had assistance, have taken advantage of the opportunities and have raised and conserved much food. She further reports evidences of good citizenship, which is on the up grade in her district and predicts progress in the Federal Resettlement Rehabilitation program. In this both Mr. McPherson and Mr. Anderson concur.
