SUMMONS BY PUBLICATION

North Carolina,
Transylvania County.

H. Federer John J. Federer, Plaintiff, vs.

J. A. Cogdill, Adlie Cogdill, Arthur Hill, Rhodie Hill, Luther Hill and Robert Hill, Defendants.

The defendants, J. A. Cogdill, Adlie Cogdill, Arthur Hill, Rhodie Hill, Luther Hill and Robert Hill, in the above entitled special proceeding pending in the Superior court of Transylvania county before the clerk of said court will each take notice that on the 10th day of December, 1914, a summons in said special proceeding was issued against said defendants above named by N. A. Miller, clerk of the Superior court of Transylvania county, state of North Carolina, which summons is returnable before said clerk at his office in the court house in the town of Brevard, state of North Carolina, on the 10th day of January, 1915. The above mentioned defendants will also take notice that said special proceeding is brought by the plaintiff against the defendants for the purpose of securing an order for sale and partition of certain lands in Transylvania county, North Carolina, and said defendants and each of them are required to appear and answer or demur to the complaint or petition of the plaintiff on the return day above mentioned, otherwise the relief prayed for in said petition will be granted. This the 17th day of December, 1914.

N. A. MILLER,
Clerk of Superior Court.

Woman.

The most simple, most frivolous and thoughtless woman hides at the bottom of her soul a spark of heroism, which neither she herself nor anybody else suspects, which she never shows if her life runs its normal course, but which springs into evidence and manifests itself by actions of devotion and self-sacrifice if fate strikes her or those whom she loves. Then she does not wince, she does not complain nor give way to useless despair, but rushes into the breach. The woman who hesitates to put her feet into cold, placid water, throws herself into the perils of the roaring, surging mad stream.—Lombroso.

The Great Book.

Henry M. Stanley set out upon his great African exploration with quite a formidable library. One cannot march 18 hours a day under an equatorial sun, and he gave a prudent thought to the long encampments and armed himself with books. But books are heavy baggage and one by one his servants deserted him. As a consequence, Stanley was compelled to leave one treasured set of volumes at this African village, and another at that, until at last he had but two books left—Shakespeare and the Bible. And we have no doubt that had Africa been a still broader continent, even Shakespeare would have been abandoned.

Deterioration.

Seated before a very conventional painting by a Royal academician, John Sloan, the other, said at a tea in New York: "This painting is a good example of the Royal academy's work. As I look at it, I remember a remark that Whistler made at one of the Royal academy's annual shows. Whistler, after a survey of the execrable paintings in the gray old galleries, said: 'Great men's originals are always interesting, but it isn't generally known that several Royal academicians actually began life as artists!'"

Not Too Long.

Conversation among a group of visiting housewives had turned upon the boiling of eggs, and the little daughter of the house explained that she knew how to boil eggs, and always boiled them "just eight minutes." "Eight minutes, dear?" cried one of her listeners, in amazement. "Are you quite sure you boil them so long? I should think that would make the eggs very hard." "Oh, no, indeed, Mrs. Blank," was the child's confident answer; "really, they're awfully loose!"
