An accident to a freight train last Friday between Quebec and Lake Taxaway, disarranged the entire train schedule for twenty-four hours. The conductor of the freight train, Mr. H. W. Ownbey, was injured in jumping from the train. His leg was broken at the ankle.

Mr. E. B. Aisop came from Washington D. C., Mr. J. F. Hays from New York, and Mr. A. K. Orr from Asheville to be present at the annual meeting of Transylvania railway officials in Brevard this week. The friends of Mr. Hays were pleased to see how much he had improved in health since leaving here last winter for Florida.

Mr. W. L. Aiken shipped to Richmond, Va., Tuesday a car load of cattle, all the home product of this immediate section. There were nineteen steers, most of which were raised by Mr. J. McNeill Cantrell, about five miles from town. The largest weighed 1,600 and the smallest 1,030 pounds, the average weight being 1,335 pounds.

Last Sunday evening's service at the Baptist church was one of an unusual kind, being devoted to music and singing. Mr. McDaniel gave a history of many of the hymns which have come into general use in Christian churches, and the singing of the hymns by the congregation followed each descriptive account. The service was interesting and instructive.

A slide in the moving picture shows requests ladies to remove their hats. This seems a perfectly reasonable request, and the custom of going hatless to places of public entertainment is now very general even where the halls have sloping floors. In a picture hall with a level floor, hats form necessarily an obstruction of the view. They should be discarded for the benefit of the many.

The Bromfield laundry, near the depot opened up for the business of serving the public, this week. The new building is a decided advantage to the business, and the general appearance of the interior is neat, orderly and up-to-date. Beside the Superintendent, Mr. U. C. Harwell, and the book keeper, Mr. J. H. Jenkins, there are about half a dozen employees on the inside work, with more hands to be employed later.

Mr. T. S. Wood recently received intelligence of the death of his brother, Mr. James Wood, of Galashiels, Scotland. A clipping from a Galashiels newspaper, in giving a sketch of the deceased, spoke of a record of life and achievement of which any man might be proud. Special emphasis was laid on the religious character and church activity of Mr. James Wood, who seems to have been a Presbyterian of the sturmiest Scottish type. The sympathy of the News is extended to our townsman in this bereavement.

Since the opening of Spring and the awaking activity of the nibblers, all of the News force except one at one time or another have responded to the call of the stream with varying fortunes. The latest response to the irresistible was made by two, who, after the day's work was done, betook themselves to the river with the expectation of returning some time before the next breakfast. But the call of the stream was even more powerful to one of the fishermen than he had been aware of. Coming to the mouth of a creek, he descended into it with unaccustomed rapidity and was swallowed up to the waist. This had a decidedly dampening effect on the ardor of the fisherman, and soon resulted in a fishless retreat for home.

A Coming Millionaire.

Daddy, have you got a 'mometer?' The patient father explained to his promising offspring that there were all sorts of 'mometers,' instruments galore for gauging this, that and the other thing exactly, and the poor man thought he was imparting valuable information. Then he asked his five-year-old what he wanted such an instrument for. Summarized, the reply follows:

'Well, you see, daddy, Billy and me has got a lemonade stand. We can't sell any lemonade unless people think they're thirsty. So, when we sees a man comin' up street, we light a match, put it under the 'mometer, an' when th' man passes he looks at the 'mometer, sees how awful hot it is and he gets thirsty. Then we sell him a glass of lemonade. That's why I want a 'mometer.'

Lawyers Still Use Quill Pens.
The quill pen is not quite extinct in London. The legal profession, which is very conservative, clings to it tenaciously, and none of the courts would be completely equipped without a plentiful supply of good goose quills. Have you noticed what an indispensable accessory the quill is to counsel, whether in ostentatiously taking a note, making a speech, or in helping to point a warning finger at a hostile witness?—London Chronicle.

NEELEY HOME DESTROYED

Just as we go to press Thursday about noon the country home of Mrs. M. J. Neely, about one mile from town, was totally destroyed by fire, starting from a defective flue in the kitchen. There is $2,200 insurance on the building and its contents; it is understood, and the volunteer firemen who rushed in from neighboring farms, together with those who went from town in automobiles, succeeded in saving some of the furniture, clothing, piano, and all the meat from the smokehouse. About $50 in cash was burned, it being in a trunk in an upstairs room.

The building being outside the town limits and there being no water main near it, the firemen from town did not take the fire fighting apparatus out, but most of the firemen with many other volunteers rushed to the scene, but before many of them got there the flames had gained such headway that there was nothing they could do except remove the few things saved farther from the flames.

The building destroyed was one of the old landmarks, having been built about fifty years ago, and is generally known as the Neely homestead.

Mother's Day at the Baptist church next Sunday. All mothers are invited to come and bring all their children of all ages and hear the sermon by the pastor appropriate to the day. We want all the Sunday school children to remain and sing for the mother's service. Everybody welcome.

Immortality of Lower Animals.

If man is immortal, so are the lower animals. Such is the conclusion at which that able student, Ernest Bert M. A., arrives after years of patient research. He neither affirms nor denies that human and subhuman will live forever. His one contention is that what befalls the one will happen to the other.

Cave Relics to College.

Miss Mary Wilkinson, granddaughter of Bishop Keener, has given to the University of Atlanta, some of the most valued and interesting things from the collection which she inherited from her illustrious grandfather. Among these was the only original likeness of Wesley.
