Critical Examination Into the Record and Standing of

DR. J. H. DANIEL, SPECIALIST IN TREATMENT OF CANCER AND SCROFULAS AFFECTIONS, DUNN, HARNETT COUNTY, N. C.

Editorial Correspondence.

In response to numerous inquiries we have made thorough and unbiased examination into the record of this physician, and as a result of such impartial investigation we can not but bestow our heartiest approval and commendation. As the investigation was conducted without the aid and even without the knowledge of the subject of this report, and is based altogether upon facts furnished from the highest and most disinterested sources, and from confidential expressions of representatives of the financial and commercial interests of the community, its fairness may be implicitly trusted, and its suggestions safely acted upon by those seeking highest ability and superlative skill.

This journal neither solicits nor paid "write ups" of any physician, and no interests save those of its readers, but is always ready and willing to proclaim rare and phenomenal merit wherever such is found. In this case an overwhelming array of competent testimony was freely offered to prove ability of the highest type which has achieved success bordering upon the miraculous. Indeed, all the evidence was unanimously in favor—nothing against—not a single note of discord to jar upon the harmony of universal praise. Leaders in the marts of trade; highest officials in the banks; the heads of industrial institutions, all when questioned heartily conceded tribute in words so eulogistic that our representatives could not but believe that a master of his profession—a physician of paramount skill—had impressed his inherent worth upon the people. Case after case was cited wherein the ability of the local practitioner and family physician was unavailing—where every means proved impotent and vain—where as a last resort—almost in desperation—this mastful skill was sought, and as a result immediate relief and permanent cure was obtained. This has been repeated until it has ceased to excite wonder—until the community regards it as an every-day affair. The pages of this paper would not contain an enumeration of the cases of the afflicted who have appealed to this "court of last resort"—all other hope dead—and now gladly proclaim their restoration to health and happiness—to home and friends—who in their gratitude and joy gladly spreads the tidings that others who are falling faint and foot-sore to die in despair, may look up and catch the glorious hope which shines down upon the diseased-stricken as does the golden orb of day into the cimmerian darkness of chaos.

But there are those who are still ignorant of this great healing power, who know not how near at hand is succor from suffering, and read cure for the most obstinate ailments, complicated diseases and chronic complaints which have withstood every known power, and baffled all ordinary skill. To those unfamiliar with this New Hope we would come with words good cheer, bringing promise of the blessings of health, obtainable, we know, from no other source save this. To this class of unfortunates these words should come like unto a new gospel of physical regeneration, bringing sweetest comfort to those grievously afflicted, who, having exhausted all known skill, are ready to give up in despair. To such we would say that we know whereof we write when we state that we have satisfied ourselves beyond the slightest peradventure of a doubt that a cure is here obtainable when no other hope exists on earth.

We will cheerfully and promptly answer any and all letters from readers concerning this eminently successful practitioner, but would suggest that correspondence be sent directly to this office, as thereby much valuable time will be saved, and the writer be placed in touch with the most marvelous curative power of the day. Whilst we will willingly respond to all inquiries we can not more strongly emphasize our word. It would be impossible to speak more emphatically regarding this beneficent power to heal, and in the light of investigation we could not honestly say less than we have. We have found where a cure can be obtained when a lesser skill fails, and in common justice make such facts known to thousands who will gladly avail themselves of this masterful ability. For these reasons we bestow the unqualified indorsement and approval of this journal. Upon the trustworthiness of such commendation we willingly rest the confidence of every reader, and the prestige gained in seventeen years of honorable and unbiased journalism. This we do without money and without price—not even asking the gratitude of the physician but solely and alone that our readers, whose interest we represent may secure the choicest blessings of health from this sure source when every other has been appealed to, and appealed to in vain.—Western Trade Journal and Trade Review. Chicago.

It is with pleasure that we publish the above piece in regard to the Dr. he has been with us near three years and since he has been here he has had patients from all parts of the country and have had calls to different states and during the whole of this time we have failed to hear one word detrimental to his success.

The above piece is reproduced without any fee or solicitation from the Dr. but solely for the benefit of those suffering with the above disease.—Ed.

JUR WASHINGTON LETTER

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

The political-social ball has begun. Congress the pulse of the National Capital—throbs again with its wonted vitality. Congress in session means a great deal to Washington. This time it means the opening up of the political and legislative machinery at least three months earlier than usual and with the probabilities that that once it is set in motion it will continue to operate until June roses bloom again. With the presence of the government's official heads and of those folks whose personality and ability assist in making the Capital one of the most unique and interesting cities in the world, there is no good reason why that undeniable power commonly called "society" should not also have a big inning.

It will have much to do, for political asperities must be tempered, and there are clouds that need to be brightly lined. It can be stated on the authority of the greatest travelers that so far as physical comfort is concerned it is impossible to strike a better average-climateological or otherwise than in this city by the Potomac; a fact well worth remembering. In September the "season" will be well on, and the activity will know no cessation until the coming of mid-summer heat almost a year hence.

What will Congress do? How long will it take to do it? These are the more important questions asked in financial circles, but of course they remain unanswered, and so long as that dubious condition remains there is but little chance for a material improvement of the situation. There are two things a large proportion of the people of this country want Congress to do. First, something which will restore confidence in our currency. Second, something that will help bring about international bimetalism. There are various opinions about the Sherman law, and there are also differences of opinion as to removing the tax on State banks. These two subjects are firebrands which may keep Congress talking months, while the industries of the country are suffering. Why not leave them for discussion at a later time, and let Congress enact now a law declaring that it is the settled policy of this country to keep every dollar as good as every other dollar, and instructing the President to sell gold bonds in order to make this policy effective. Such a declaration, followed by the sale of twenty-five millions of bonds, would restore confidence, and would go a long way towards bringing about an international bimetallic agreement. But the President should have authority to sell five hundred millions of bonds if he should think it necessary. The objection is that the sale of bonds will increase our interest account, should not have weight. It is absolutely nothing, compared to the vital importance of doing something to start up the wheels of industry and make trade possible. We are losing more every day than the interest on a hundred million bonds would come to in a year. Let Congress act at once in a decisive manner to restore confidence in all classes of the country's currency.

There is excellent authority for the statement that Mr. Cleveland will send a special message to Congress at its extra session in regard to the Hawaiian question. Preparations to that end have been completed at the State Department. It is learned that Minister Blount regards the situation as extremely critical, and that he has advised prompt action on the part of government as the only way of averting serious trouble on the islands. He says the people are chafing over the delay on the part of this government to act on their appeal for annexation, and are beginning to feel that they are being trifled with.

The friends of ex President Harrison in Washington are displeased at the announcement which has been widely circulated declaring that a secret organization of clubs had been formed to re-enter him for the Presidential race in 1896, which was placarding the state of Indiana under the direction of Gen. L. T. Michener. Gen. Michener says he is not connected with any such scheme. "The next presidential campaign is a long way off," he remarked. "No one can tell whether the conditions which would lead to a demand for Gen. Harrison's renomination will exist in 1896. Should there be a movement to bring him to the front again it will not come through the medium of a secret society. No one knows or can prophesy what may be the political situation in 1896."

It is stated at the Treasury Department that there is no likelihood of the resumption of the issue of gold certificates until the free gold stands from seven to ten million above the reserve. The free gold is now nearly $900,000.

Mr Cleveland looks visibly fatigued. His face is bronzed by the exposure to the sun as a result of his outings on Buzzard's Bay and he looks stouter than he did when he left Washington. There is no trace of rheumatism in his walk, however, and he steps along as firmly as ever.

The United States Treasury continues to improve and before long will be able to sit up.

What one of the Delegates says of Dunn and his visit to the Conference.

This letter was written to the Advocate by one of the visiting Delegates to the Methodist Conference, and we clip it so that our people may see what other people think of our town, and its hospitality to visitors and strangers.

The Wilson District Conference met at Dunn, N. C., last Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. We had the pleasure of being at the opening service. Rev. G. A. Oglesby, the Presiding Elder of the district, was present and in the chair. It was a matter of great pleasure to us all that his health has so much improved recently. He is looking well and seems to be in his usual health. He is greatly beloved by his preachers and people, and his recent feeble health has been a source of great anxiety to his many friends. He is a fine executive—thoroughly understands the law of his church and knows how to administer it.

Rev. Geo. T. Simmons was elected secretary of the conference. He is a model of neatness and accuracy. He is the pastor at Dunn—is nicely domiciled in a newly painted parsonage. Everything in his charge seems to be in fine condition.

Presiding Elder Oglesby introduced a new feature in connection with his district conference. Every morning from eight until nine o'clock he had the conference to spend an hour in the study of the Bible. The first morning this service was conducted by Rev. D. H. Tuttle. It was a most profitable service. The second morning the meeting was thrown open and quite a number spoke of the importance and influence of Bible study and made suggestions as to the best methods of studying the Bible.

Dunn is a new and very thriving town on the Wilson and Fayetteville "Short Cut" road. Methodism was planted there by Rev. J. F. Butt. He began in an old store-house. Now they have an elegant new church and a nice parsonage. The conference was well entertained and made a fine impression on the community. We had a pleasant home with Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Parker.

A Challenge.

A prominent business man of this city authorizes the Gazette to state that a purse of $150,000 will be offered at any time, again, to any man who will amount from the State of North Carolina three out of four seats on the State grounds to be hereafter determined. This is square and bona fide. Fayetteville Gazette.
