OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Now that the long roll-beat of oratory in the House has ceased, and the battle is transferred to the Senate the public is beginning to recognize in detail the merits of many of the speeches that have been made. It may not be that they have added materially to the stock of knowledge on the questions at issue, but taken together they exhibit a good average of ability, and the debate has been conducted in a spirit of dignity and good temper which, considering the sharpness of the contention, is as remarkable as it is gratifying.

An unusual feature of this discussion is the earnestness and promptitude with which so many of new members came to the front in behalf of their constituencies. Decided as the innovation may be, it is a good sign that of the 110 or more set speeches made on the silver question since the session met, fully one-third were by members who had never served in the House before.

Talk about the legislators sweating during this August weather. There is no cooler place they can be at this season than the Capitol building, unless they go up on the mountains or get in an ice box. Of course men who leap and plunge like a gymnast in a delirium in an effort to make an impressive speech, could not keep cool in cold storage. But as a matter of fact, the Capitol building is more comfortable as a working place in the summer than it is in the winter. With the massive malleable walls set on a crust of a hill it is almost proof against heat, except when the heat comes from within. In the winter when the air is kept in the building until it has become overheated the building is intolerable; perspiration springs from every pore when the thermometer registers zero outside, and the legislative blood is stagnant and the brain dull.

If the country's legislators are not all quite comfortable it is the fault of their not knowing how to dress. Fully three-fourths of the men seen on the floor of the House and Senate are dressed in black, and most of them in rather heavy materials. The most seasonably dressed men are from the north. The suits of Kentucky jeans or tow linen are worn by men from Maine, New York or the shores of Michigan.

It was for Tom Reed, from the cool state of Maine, to set an example in this clothing. While he was Speaker of the House he adopted a negligee shirt and a sash, and now he wears a tow-linen suit through which sand might be sifted—coat, vest and trousers, which wave about his bulky form like a breeze. Fitch of New York is a thing of beauty in a spotless suit of cream flannel. Dr. Everett, the Bostonese who appealed to the silver men not to "deposit" him in a "cavity," has enveloped himself in a yellow negligee shirt adorned with the ugliest checked tie, save one that mortal ever looked upon. The only less becoming make up is the House and the only uglier adorn the rugged figure of the gentlemen from Kansas. Mr. Simpson. He wears a yellow silk negligee shirt with puffed front and a tie with the colors of Joseph's coat—badly blended in checks. In the Senate dignity and suits of salem black prevail, but Senators Gray, Platt and Vance have given up their vests. Sherman looks cool without regard to his clothes.

From politicians and statesmen alike come remarks as to the financial situation which should cheer the hearts of many now desponding mortals. Slowly but certainly the strain upon the money market is letting up and with favorable action by Congress the coming of good times and easy money is not likely long to be delayed. In the great manufacturing centers there is much more activity and it is quite possible that many of those concerns that were compelled to shut down because money was being hoarded will again be producers of goods and distributors of currency. The outlook has improved wonderfully, and there is every reason for believing that the improvement will continue. This country is too great and has too many varieties of industry to be paralyzed even by such a distressing combination of circumstances as brought about the stringency which wrecked so many fortunes and for a while retarded prosperity.

The greatest gathering of medical men this country has ever known will meet in Washington September 5, at the first Pan American Medical Congress. Representatives from all the republics of all the Americas will be present. The congress was devised to bring together the nations of the Western Continent with a view of forming a new world policy, and creating a concert of action in the practice of medicine. Congress at its last session appropriated $15,000 to successfully carry out the idea, and in accordance with the above law the President by proclamation issued invitations to all the Americas to send delegates and participate in the congress. According to the program, President Cleveland will deliver the address of welcome.

Although the President and Mrs. Cleveland still remain at their cottage by the sea, several members of the Cabinet family have returned and are settled in their homes. I cannot recall a time during the past twenty years when there have been so many little children in the Cabinet and official circles. Indeed Mrs. Cleveland's freshness and the charm of a young matron as the centre of it all, gives every domestic atmosphere to the official life of the present administration.

SPECIAL.

The lady who bake and exhibit the best dozen rolls at the State Fair of 1893, can get fifty dollars in gold as a premium for the same. The second best dozen will get thirty dollars; the third best, fifteen dollars; and the fourth best five dollars—all paid in gold.

H. W. Ayer Secretary of the State Fair is able to make this announcement to the ladies of the State through the liberal courtesy of the Straiburg Steam Flouring Mills, which are represented in Raleigh by Mr. E. L. Harris. This gentleman has notified the Secretary that his mills would give the premiums mentioned above, the only condition being that the rolls shall be made of the "Acme" brand of flour by parties who shall have used that flour from July 15th, 1893, or about that time, till the Fair.

This condition does not mean that anyone who may wish to compete for the premiums above must begin buying the flour on July 15. It may be that many would like to compete who may have on hand a supply of flour that would last for thirty or sixty days and Mr. Harris does not intend that anyone with such supply on hand shall be debarred from competition. The object is to cause familiarity with the "home" brand, so
