MANY CARP CAUGHT AFTER RAIN FRIDAY

Pitchforks and Rifles Are Called Into Service By Fishermen.

Fishing with pitchforks and rifles may be counted poor sportsmanship by some persons, but is a sure way to get some nice meat, according to several Brevard residents who were seen in the French Broad river bottoms late Friday and early Saturday.

With the heavy rains of Thursday night and Friday morning the French Broad overflowed its banks, forming large shallow lakes in pastures and cornfields. With the swirling waters as they left low places in the river bank came also large carp, "Red Horse" and other large species.

Method of snaring these fish, some of which weigh up to 15 pounds as was the vogue here Friday and Saturday, is to get near the river, wait until a large one is seen making the water ripple in the shallow pools and then go after it with the gig as a dog would after a rabbit. Aside from the fine meat to be had, there is the attendant fun of seeing the "other fellow" get numerous duckings.

SHOOTS SELF WHILE PLAYING WITH GUN

Coy Hogged Wounded In Neck When He Shows That He "Is Unafraid"

Coy Hogged, aged about twenty, wanted to show his young friend Mack Feaster, that he "wasn't afraid of a pistol," and as result landed in Lyday Memorial hospital, severely wounded, and for a time thought to be critical.

As told to Sheriff Tom Wood, who investigated the matter Monday afternoon immediately after the accident occurred, the two young men were seated in a room at the home of Hogged near the outskirts of Brevard, examining a .32 calibre pistol belonging to Hogged. Young Feaster is said to have handed the gun to Hogged with the explanation that he was afraid of any kind of pistol and did not want to handle them.

Hogged, according to story told by both young men, thereupon placed the pistol at his throat and pulled the trigger several times, causing the hammer to rise nearly to its full height, each time letting it down easily upon the cartridge in the chamber. After several trials he evidently pulled the trigger a little too far with result that the gun went off, the bullet plowing into his neck, tearing a jagged hole in the windpipe, ranging downward and lodging in the left shoulder.

Feaster immediately summoned aid and the young man was carried to the hospital, where his condition Wednesday was reported as very good. No arrest was made by Sheriff Wood, he being satisfied that it was an accident.

Hogged is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Hogged of East Brevard, while Feaster is a son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Feaster, also of East Brevard.

Court House Grounds Are Now Show Place, With Nice Shrubbery Growing

High backs, artistically built, add "just the touch" to other improvements that had already been made by the Civic club.
