The Minter Homes company of this city manufacturers of ready cut houses are to erect a frame building which will take care of 60 students. This building will be complete in two weeks, in ample time for the opening on September 15.

Protesting against the proposed reclassification of freight rates by Southern railroads, the Greenville chamber of commerce through its board of directors, has gone on record as being strongly opposed to the suggested changes. It was pointed out that in view of the advanced freight rates the proposed changes in classifications would result in increases on some commodities of as much as 100 per cent or more.

That women teachers should receive the same pay as men is the opinion of Judge J. W. Devore, now presiding over the court of general sessions. "A woman should receive as much pay as a man for the same work," says Judge Devore. "They are entitled to it and there's no good reason why they shouldn't get it." He charged the grand jurors, however, to see to it that the schools be conducted not for the benefit of the teachers, but for the efficient instruction of the pupils.

Charleston.—Every hour from noon the city fire alarm rang out tidings of the success of the women of America, this being done in compliance with a proclamation issued by Mayor Grace, in which he ordered the city bells sounded and flags displayed.

Fort Mill.—It is believed by some of the older inhabitants that Fort Mill experienced its heaviest rainfall, the precipitation undoubtedly being more than 18 inches between the hours of 2:15 and 10 o'clock. The earliest fall came at the earlier hour and as stated by a citizen who was awake at the time was very sudden, coming during intense quiet and without wind or electric disturbance.

Aiken.—Pre-election day gossip in Aiken county has been suddenly hushed from the even tenor of its way by the positive assertion in an address at Wagener, of Former Governor Cole L. Blease that he will not cast his ballot in the Democratic primaries this year because he can not pledge himself to support the national presidential nominee.

This assertion comes in sharp conflict with the lengthy telegram of congratulations which Mr. Blease dispatched to Governor Cox on the occasion of the latter receiving the Democratic nomination.

Expensive Automobile Ride

Greenville.—Herbert Winbush, Imperial hotel porter here, started out to ride in the hotel's bus without permission. The bus wrecked and Winbush found himself in a few minutes behind bars on one city charge and five state charges. The city charge is using the bus without the owner's consent. The five state charges are: two for using the car without permission, one for malicious mischief, one for reckless driving and one for driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of whiskey.

High Grade Tobacco High

Timmonsville.—High grades of tobacco are continuing to bring excellent prices on this market. Quite a lot of it was sold for 83 cents a pound. The warehouses are full each day and the sales continue until late in the evening. It is said that a great deal more tobacco is being sold in this market than ever before. Late at night and before sun up one constantly hears the rattle of tobacco wagons on their way to the warehouses preparatory to unloading their tobacco for the earliest sales.

PROHIBITION NOT CAMPAIGN ISSUE

BOTH OLD PARTIES FAVOR THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW LIKE ANY OTHER.

WETS SEE NO HOPE THERE

Hence They Are Concentrating Their Efforts on Congressional Elections in Many Districts, With Slim Chances of Success.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—Prohibition is not to be an issue in the presidential campaign. So far as the public declarations of the two old parties are concerned, either one of them, if successful, will favor the enforcement of the law, just as it will favor the enforcement of other federal laws. Neither party in convention was willing to make any promises whatsoever with respect to the modification of the enforcing legislation, and it is pretty well understood that the presidential nominees will go through the campaign without making any pledges along this line.

The wet interests were somewhat disappointed over this failure to obtain any measure of support from either of the old political parties. These interests had hoped that one or the other of the parties would get behind modifying legislation. The failure of both to come to the rescue of the wets has convinced a good many persons, who were not entirely convinced before the national conventions were held, that prohibition is here to stay. They arrive at this decision through reasoning that the longer the prohibition amendment is in effect, the more difficult it will be to undo the work it is performing. It is conceivable, say persons who take this view of the situation, that if either of the party conventions had taken a definite stand against prohibition in its present form, say for instance a stand in support of the manufacture of light wines and beers, the prohibition structure might have been partially broken down. But since neither party is willing to assume the responsibility of attacking the amendment or the legislation under which it is enforced, it is regarded as practically certain that no attempt in the future to set aside prohibition will avail anything.

Wets Going After Congressmen.

This all does not mean that the advocates of modified enforcing legislation are to remain idle; it does not mean that the distillery and brewery interests and the saloon interest, whatever there may be left of it, have abandoned all hope of eventually obtaining some relief from what they regard as burdensome conditions. Since the old political parties have declined to have anything to do with any effort to set aside existing conditions, the wets have abandoned plans which they made for conducting a campaign on a national scale, and will concentrate their efforts in a large number of congressional districts.

Whatever hope they have of relief is now based on the possibility of obtaining a majority in the next congress in favor of modifying the Volstead act. The hopes along this line, it may be said, are not very buoyant; representatives of the national wet organization have only recently completed a survey of the field and have reported to headquarters here that, while it may be possible to elect a few members of the house of representatives on this issue, it is not at all probable that the new house will favor any worthwhile changes in the Volstead law. Nominations for congress have in most instances been made, and a careful canvass of the nominees made by the wet interests, so it is learned here, does not offer any encouragement for the wet cause.

Little Chance for Them There.

In this connection it is pointed out that the nominees for congress in both the old parties are, with a few exceptions, inclined to follow the lead of the national conventions and the presidential candidates. In other words, they are disposed to take the view that the prohibition question is settled and that it will be good politics for them not to stir it up in their districts.

As for the senate, the wets, so it is asserted, are of the opinion after studying that phase of the situation that they can hardly expect to bring about changes in that body that will be of genuine assistance to their cause.

Now that the senatorial nominations have for the most part been made by both the old parties, it is foreseen, it is asserted, that the new senate, regardless of which of the old parties shall control it, will in all probability be as strong for prohibition as is the present senate.

In spite of the general situation, as the politicians in both the old political parties see it, some of the more radical advocates of prohibition are inclined to be uneasy lest something might happen to prohibition as the result of the presidential election. This uneasiness, or this inclination to be on the safe side, has led the Anti-Saloon league to issue orders for a nation-wide campaign of observation and resistance against any effort to weaken prohibition. The third party prohibitionists also decline to accept the view that there are no danger signals out, and so have put up a presidential ticket for the purpose of holding the members of that party together.

HAD USE FOR HIS MILLION HE GOT HIS ROUTES MIXED

Zeb Would at Least Employ It to Good Advantage, as Far as It Would Go. A party of baymen gathered round the stove in a little oyster shack on the Great South bay started the old, old question of what they would do if they suddenly came into possession of $1,000,000. Some bought great ocean-going yachts; others endowed schools, and one even offered to contribute his to help out the government.

The question finally came round to old Zeb Banks, noted as the ne'er-do-well of the fishing neighborhood. "And now, Zeb, you've been keeping pretty quiet," one of them said. "Just whad'd you do if you had a million dollars?" "Well, I don't know 'zactly," responded Zeb reflectively as he spat at the stove. "I reckon I'd pay it on my debts, 's far as it went."—Saturday Evening Post.

Negro Soldier's Amusing Explanation as to How It Was He Got His Wound. A medical corps officer chanced upon a negro acquaintance of civil life one day in France. "How do you like the army, Mose?" he asked. "'S'All right so far, cap'n," replied the negro, "but Ah don' know how I'm goin' to like it when dem Germans shoots at me." "Don't worry about that," replied the officer. "All you have to do is zig-zag." And he demonstrated. "The next time the two met, the negro was in a hospital. "What's the matter with you, Mose?" asked the officer. "I ain't sure, cap'n, but Ah think I must have been ziggin' 'bout de time Ah oughta been zaggin'."—American Legion Weekly.

Uniform Berries. "What nice large strawberries!" said the lady in the market. "Yes, ma'am; aren't they beauties?" replied the man with the near-white apron. "How do you sell them?" "Fifty cents a quart, ma'am." "And are they 'ust the same at the bottom of the basket as on the top?" "Oh, yes, ma'am; fifty cents a quart, just the same."
