

OVERLAND CAR HAS LOW COST

Upkeep Low—One Man Drives Car Nine Years With Little Expense.

Important factors in the manufacture of Overland cars, as proved daily by enthusiastic reports from owners, include, factory engineers declare, an unusual built-in quality that insures long life and fine service in the hands of Overland owners.

Ever since Willys-Overland first brought out the Overland four-cylinder car, quality has been the all-important feature, coupled with the lowest possible price, according to company officials.

Thousands and thousands of Overland owners are highly enthusiastic over the performance of their cars, and unusual illustrations of Overland performance daily reach the Willys-Overland factory.

H. M. Vandergraaf, of Goodwin, S. D., purchased his Overland in June, 1916. "This car has been in continuous service since its purchase," he writes, "and only yesterday I drove it more than 200 miles through mud and over bad roads without the slightest trouble, carrying four grown people and four children in the car."

One company executive, in commenting on this owner's letter, declared: "That is just typical of built-in quality that has marked Overlands ever since we started to construct them."

"My total expense for parts, mechanical service, etc., continues Vandergraaf's letter, "has been but $24.95 in the entire time I have had the car. A neighbor and myself overhauled the engine last winter for the first time in the nine years' excellent service this car has given." Such illustrations of the fine performance of the economical Overland cars over a long period of time are every-day occurrences at the factory, Willys Overland officials declare.

Call at the W. L. Horn Overland Co., Forest City, and let them tell you more about the wonderful Overland.
