Ruthven McDonald and His Highlanders at Coming Redpath Chautauqua

An outstanding feature of the coming Redpath Chautauqua will be Ruthven McDonald and His Highlanders, one of the foremost singing organizations of the day.

This popular company was organized in the Dominion of Canada, and critics everywhere have unqualifiedly endorsed it, praising the remarkable organ-like tonal quality of the ensemble work and the excellent individual artistry.

Splendid as the company is in the rendition of numbers of genuine musical worth, ranging from grand opera selections to old Scotch ballads, it also excels in the presentation of songs of a humorous character. As a matter of fact, the program is calculated to bring many an uproarious laugh.

Ruthven McDonald, who heads the company, is a noted basso cantante, and one of the most popular Canadian singers before the public.

This is a distinctive company whose appearance here will be one of the most enjoyable features of the entire Chautauqua.

LARROWE INSTITUTE OF ANIMAL ECONOMICS

UNLESS a poultryman is clearing at least two dollars for each layer in his flock every year, there is something wrong with the methods he is using, says the Larrowe Institute of Animal Economics. It may be a case of poor layers, poor housing or just plain poor food.

Even the best bred hen will not lay day after day unless she is fed with those elements which she must have to turn into eggs. Any hen will lay in the spring—it's her nature to do this—but if poultry keeping is to be a profitable business the hen must be induced to lay throughout the year. During the cold weather season the days are short and the fowls require additional food. Quantity of grain is important but it takes mash containing egg-making nutrients to produce eggs from Labor day to Easter.

Syphilis in early life may attack the heart, causing weakness or death in later years, even after the disease itself is no longer apparent.

After the heart muscle has been destroyed or the valves all scarred up they can never again be brought back to their normal shape and function. If this condition has been caused by syphilis, treatment will cure the disease and stop further damage but treatment for syphilis will not restore again the heart to its normal condition any more than it would restore skin to its normal shape and smoothness that has been drawn and scarred by a severe burn. A scarred heart like scarred skin will remain always. The only time that kind of heart disease can be cured is to cure the disease before the damage to the heart has been done.

Improper habits of living leaves their mark on the heart. Many people owe their ill-health to ignorance or indifference. Eating too much, exercising too little, living too closely indoors, too little and irregular sleep, the overuse of alcohol, coffee, tea and tobacco are very common faults which may and often do serious damage to the heart.

When we are asleep the heart beats on an average of ten beats less per minute than when we are awake. That is one reason why plenty of sleep keeps us in good condition. The heart must have some rest and the only rest it can get is that brief instant between beats. The person that brags about how little sleep he can get along with is only exposing his ignorance and admitting that he is slowly and insidiously committing suicide. All adults need at least eight hours quiet sleep and children much more.

It is often said that "it is worry, not work, that kills." This is because worry puts a maximum strain upon the heart. If you have heart trouble learn to develop a calm, even attitude toward life. Avoid excitement or situations where you become angry or aroused. Develop a fixed schedule for the day and do not deviate from it. Sleep at least ten hours out of the twenty-four and as much more as your individual case demands. Stay out-of-doors as much as possible, watch your weight, avoid all stimulants and drugs except those specifically prescribed by your doctor.

WHOOPIING COUGH

In the spring is when whooping cough does its worst. There are each year in North Carolina about five hundred lives lost as a direct result of whooping cough and about 13,000 cases. Whooping cough is a long drawn out disease which if it does not kill violently does weaken the child to such a degree that it is very susceptible to any other contagious disease or infection. So often these children contract pneumonia and also tuberculosis. About eighty-five per cent of the deaths from whooping cough occur during the first three years of life and seventy-five per cent of the cases are in children before they enter school. If the baby can be protected during its first three years from contracting whooping cough the chances are eight to one that the disease will not kill it after this age. If the older child then, when it does get the disease is given reasonable care to prevent in so far as possible debility which predisposes to complications, then whooping cough may be robbed of nearly all of its terror.

A child that has once had whooping cough is not likely to get it again. Epidemics occur in waves four or five years apart. This is because of the accumulation of non-immune children. Most of the deaths occur in children who are in a subnormal condition because of some preceding debilitating condition. Malnutrition and intestinal diseases are the conditions most often preceding whooping cough death.

The commonly expressed idea that "all children must sooner or later have whooping cough, so let them have it and be over with it" is almost criminal. Any effort is justified to prevent a baby, and especially a weakened baby, from getting this disease.

Whooping cough is spread ONLY through contact with the FRESH secretions from nose or mouth of another person suffering with the disease. The particular bug which causes it is a bacillus belonging to the same family group as the influenza bacillus. This bug dies very quickly outside the human body. Droplets diffused by coughing or sneezing are the greatest source of danger. Whooping cough vaccine often does marvelous good. The best cure is guarding your baby. If, in spite of every care your baby does get sick, then give it every possible medical care and attention.

Putting Farm Work Horses in Condition

Harvesting small grain in the great Northwest.

Progress in farm field work in the coming months depends largely on the condition of the work horses. Soft from the winter's rest, farm work horses require conditioning just as an athlete requires training for his test.

Every farmer knows that two or three weeks spent in a gradual toughening and conditioning of a horse for the heavy work is more than made up before the season of heavy field work is over. Not only does this conditioning include breaking them in to the long hours of hard pull that they must undergo, but applies as well to breaking them in to a working ration.

It is poor practice to allow a horse to pasture on much new lush grass if he is to go on a strenuous work schedule. A little grass is good for him, helps to condition him, but he must have oats, bran or old corn, or still better, a combination of the three and good sound hay. These are the best possible rations in the spring and early summer. The horse that is fed a major ration of grass soon gets soft, sweats profusely, lags and quickly plays out. Oats, bran, corn and hay will give him stamina and leave him in the best condition at the end of the day. By treating old Dobbin fairly, getting him ready for spring work with daily exercise, keeping him thoroughly groomed, especially while shedding, and a work ration instead of his winter feed will pay big dividends in a short time. If the horse takes a long time to shed his coat, this can be facilitated by thorough, frequent grooming and if this does not do the work, a clipping all over will get him through the shedding period quickly. After the horse has started to work in the field, it is advisable to bathe the shoulders and neck two or three times daily with cold, soft, salty water or with white oak bark tea which toughens and cleanses the chafed parts. A prominent veterinarian states that excessive sweating is remedied by clipping the horse. Excessive sweating weakens the animal and it is doubtless quite advisable to clip him to relieve this condition. It is also true that this practice enables the horse to be thoroughly groomed in much less time than when it retains its long winter coat of shaggy hair.
