

"The Vine"

This magnificent bronze by Harriett Frishmuth is on display in the Palace of Fine Arts at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia where the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence is being celebrated. This is but one of the many gorgeous and beautiful things to be seen in the Fine Arts exhibit. Famous artists from all parts of the world have sent their paintings, etchings and sculptures to Philadelphia to be exhibited during the exposition, which continues until December 1.

ACIDOSIS

ACIDOSIS is not a disease, it is a symptom. It is a condition found associated with many diseases, but most frequently in acute gastro-intestinal infections, and not infrequently with influenza and pneumonia. Many of the cases of so-called "billousness" are undoubtedly cases of acute gastro-intestinal infection which so prominently show the symptom of acidosis. This symptom has also led to the erroneous diagnosis of broncho-pneumonia in children.

The breath of the child suffering with this condition has a peculiar and characteristic "sweetish" odor. Usually there is scanty secretion of saliva, consequently a dry tongue. The peptic glands also secrete a scanty amount of gastric juices. The urine is acid and shows traces of albumin. There is vomiting, complete lack of appetite, even disgust for food and a fever ranging from 102 to 104 and in severe cases, still higher.

The attack may come on suddenly and without previous recognized gastric disturbance, it may follow an anesthetic or it may complicate any of the acute infectious diseases—measles, diphtheria or scarlet fever.

In severe cases there are symptoms of profound toxicity with stupor or even a comatose or semi-comatose condition. Vomiting is more uncontrollable in the severe cases and even the smallest quantities of food or water will not be retained. The stools contain mucous and sometimes undigested particles of food and streaks of blood.

The condition is most often found in that class of children who are high strung, nervous and hypersensitive. It is due to a decreased amount of alkalin salts in the blood and a decreased amount of carbon dioxide given off by the lungs. Some authorities have stated that a careful examination of the throat will always show deep seated, submerged, swollen tonsils.

Extreme prostration and grave toxicity demand the neutralization of the acidity as soon as possible before the danger point of collapse has been reached. Mild, neglected cases have been seen to grow rapidly worse within twenty-four hours and be rapidly followed by convulsions, coma and death. Many of the deaths which occur are the result of neglect early in the case. Acidosis in children is far too serious a condition to permit of wasting valuable time with home remedies or to wait to see what is going to develop.
