Gather Peach Drops To Control Worms

Along with spraying, it is important to pick up the dropped peaches and destroy them in some manner to control the worms of the peach curculio.

In the opinion of C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State college, picking up "drops" is just as important and is as much a part of curculio control as is spraying or dusting the fruit. Worms in the dropped peaches soon bore their way out of the drops into the soil and if these drops are picked up systematically and destroyed, many of the curculio worms will be killed.

Mr. Brannon says the first gathering of the drops should begin as soon as enough are on the ground to justify the labor. At least two more collections should be made five or six days apart. This procedure will get most of the worms falling to the ground in the infected peaches.

It is important, however, to so handle the drops as to destroy the worms as the collections are made. One good way is to bury the peaches in a trench 18 to 24 inches deep and to cover the infected fruit with a layer of quick lime before filling the trench with soil.

Indications are that there will be a good crop of peaches in North Carolina this season. The best prices will be paid for that fruit which is free from insect and disease damage. Wormy peaches especially are not wanted and the grower must wage a fight with the curculio to prevent these worms. Picking up the dropped fruit, should go along with spraying, through the season to control these worms, declares Mr. Brannon.

By the way the Old Folks roar at automobile crashes you might think that there were no frightful and fatal runaways in the horse and buggy days.

Under the direction of officers who understand the needs of the farmer and grower, and are always ready to cooperate for the good of individuals and corporations, this institution meets all the problems of the day and invariably offers a correct solution. Their service is most complete and covers all phases of modern banking.

A banking institution, as well as an individual, has character written through its history, by the difficulties it overcomes in the struggles toward the attainment of its ideals. In the Union Trust Company you will find strength, seasoned judgment, dependability, accuracy in handling details, and breadth of financial vision—and all to be applied to the management of your commercial and financial affairs. This well-known bank and its officers have afforded the public every accommodation in a banking way, and have greatly aided in the development of this part of the state. The fact that we have here this bank with its excellent accommodations, has been one of the important factors in the development of this section of North Carolina.

In making this review of the progress of today, we desire to compliment the officers of this bank upon the fact that its officers have studied the banking history of the country, and, seeing the needs of the present day, have fittingly maintained an institution that meets all the requirements of the complex business situation of the twentieth century, hence, the good people of this section should be exceedingly proud of the fact that the Union Trust Company is one of the stable, standard and most reliable banking houses to be found anywhere within the confines of this section of the south.

N. C. LEGISLATURE HAS ADJOURNED

Longest Session in History of State Comes to End—Accomplished Much.

The North Carolina General Assembly adjourned the longest session in the history of the state Wednesday night, after being in session 141 days. An agreement was reached on a compromise revenue bill, and then everything was geared up to put the bill through and adjourn as quickly as possible.

As adopted, the revenue bill provides for a 15 cent ad valorem tax on the counties for school purposes, and the state accepts in principle the maintenance of the six-months school. Income taxes are raised and so are taxes on corporations. Also there is a merchants' sales tax of one-tenth of one per cent on gross sales. The out-come was a victory for the McLean law proponents, in that the principle of state support of schools was adopted and the property tax was cut materially. However, it will be many months before the exact effect of the new law will be worked out.

Appropriations all up and down the line were cut, including a uniform reduction of 10 per cent in the pay of state employes with a few exceptions. The present impression is that the cost of operating schools will be reduced considerably.

Session's Accomplishments.

Although the Assembly failed to entirely relieve property of the burden of the six months schools, it did provide substantial tax relief through its road and school legislation, and despite the general impression gained from its long revenue deadlock that it had accomplished little, the 1931 Assembly did, as summarized by the Raleigh News and Observer:

Adopt the principle of the MacLean school law providing for state instead of county operation of the six months schools.

Give State supervision and control of 45,000 miles of county roads and some 4,000 convicts to be used in maintaining them.

Create an eleventh congressional district but failed to redistrict for the State Senate or reapportion for the House.

Provide $400,000 for the erection of a new central prison.

Create a Local Government Commission and give it control over all local government finances.

Organize a new State system of bank supervision.

Enact largest revenue bill in history, estimated to raise about $26,000,000 annually including a 15-cent county ad valorem tax. (Experts estimate that it will result in a $4,000,000 deficit.)

Enact largest appropriations bill in history, estimated to spend about $28,500,000 annually, even after reducing salaries 10 per cent.

Defeat a luxury tax, but adopt a general sales tax under the guise of a merchant's license levy.

Provide for postponement of revaluation until 1934 but recognize revaluations already made by allowing a 10 per cent "adjustment" in the discretion of commissioners.
