Prevent Bad Eggs By Penning Rooster

After the hatching season is over the male bird is of little value to the poultry flock and should be penned away from the laying hens to prevent the production of fertile eggs. "Bad eggs come to the market in increasing numbers with the hot weather of mid-summer," says C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at State college. "If proper conditions are made, the egg is as nearly a perfect food product as one can find. To have this good egg, however, the hens must be well fed, the nests kept clean, and the eggs gathered twice daily and stored in a cool, clean place. The customer gladly pays an increased price for such an egg but he gives a sigh of disgust if the eggs come to him dirty and partly decayed."

Bad eggs are caused by allowing the rooster to run with the laying flock after the hatching season is over; by gathering eggs only once a day, and by storing them in a warm place, poorly ventilated and marketing only when a case has been filled. Mr. Parrish estimates that poultry growers of North Carolina lose about $500,000 annually because of poor methods of producing and handling their eggs. At least one-third of this is preventable because it is due to partial hatching of fertile eggs which become warm enough to incubate. The rooster makes the egg fertile and the fertilized egg produces a blood ring which is the partial development of the chick.

The rooster does not increase egg production, he merely fertilizes the germ of the egg. The hot days have the same effect on the egg as the hen or the incubator. Heat is the great enemy of eggs both fertile and infertile. When the blood ring forms in a fertile egg it is unsuited for food or market purposes, says Mr. Parrish.

Too Much ACID MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes. You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that physicians have prescribed for over 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.
