NEVER-ENDING WAR ON INSECT PESTS

One war that never ceases is that waged by insects upon man. Every year insects cost the human race millions upon millions of dollars by their destruction of growing crops and stored harvests. And they kill or maim thousands of human beings by spreading disease.

Science is constantly engaged in investigating new means of keeping insect foes at bay, and wonderful work has been done.

The stamping out of malaria in large areas once almost uninhabitable, and the checking of the spread of sleeping sickness are examples of what has been accomplished.

Now comes news of a discovery which may open up entirely new lines of attack on insect pests. For a long time past a young Australian scientist, Dr. F. G. Holdaway, has been endeavoring to find a way of dealing with the flour beetle, which does an enormous amount of damage. He has found that the proportion of grubs that turn into males and females can be controlled by regulating their food; starve a hundred grubs for one day and the majority will develop into male beetles.

Now, the female beetle may lay thousands of eggs. If, therefore, he has found a means of decreasing the number of females, the beetle pest may be kept down. Similar principles of sex-control may be found applicable to other insect enemies of man.

A woman's face isn't always as bad as it is painted.

A train of thought should never be allowed to run wild.

Do not rest on your laurels; they make a poor mattress.

Blushes are the luminous reflections of a woman's thoughts.

Even when men go to the dogs, the dogs, friendly creatures, welcome them.

All social theories, no matter how fine, have to deal with selfish human beings.

A wise executive lets a man do the work his own way if it helps the business.

Man learned to say "No" before he learned to say "Yes"; or he wouldn't be on earth now.

No man can utterly control himself; but does that make him charitable toward others?

A man simply can't be a failure at everything if somebody will give him the right kind of a steer.

Bringing Up the Past

A certain millionaire film magnate arrived in New York from Hollywood and proceeded to make cyclonic love to one of the young women of the chorus, for whom he expressed the greatest admiration and respect.

She made certain discreet inquiries, and as the result of "information received" she asked him whether he was married.

"No!" he said. "I am a bachelor."

"But," persisted the girl, "I was told only yesterday that you were a married man."

"Not now," said the film magnate nonchalantly; "though, mind you, I did have a few wives some years ago."

Unselfish Idealism

"There is nothing that develops unselfish idealism like music," remarked the esthetic enthusiast.

"Evidently," rejoined the impresario, "you have never heard a soprano when she was talking salary or a crowd of chorus singers going on a strike."

Fortune Lying Loose

A young Pittsburgh business man is still tingling from the experience of walking into a downtown bank there the other day to write a check and finding on the counter, right under his nose, a signed and indorsed check for $58,000. He turned it in to the bank officials and was cordially thanked.

Correct Spelling

"My husband examined many diamonds before he chose this one, and he says this is the flower of them all."

"You mean f-i-o-u-r."

"Why?"

"It's paste."
