STRONG FOR WRITTEN WORD

Puritans, Unlike the Cavaliers, Early Evinced a Pronounced Liking for Literary Expression.

If there was ever a race that knew the value of the written word, it was the Puritan of New England. For the arts of music, drama and painting he cared little; he connected them with his dearest foe, Antichrist, or as Cotton Mather preferred to call him, "the devil's eldest son." But of the language to express himself in the forms permitted by his creed he was peculiarly conscious. He was not hampered by the conception already shaping itself in the minds of his Cavalier brethren in Virginia that the production of literature was a bit unworthy of the attention of a gentleman. The Puritan had that more democratic view of life which has ever been the prime essential of great creative effort, and his very social condition provided the stimulus of mind striking fire against mind which makes always for expression. He was not content, either, with describing the things immediately around him. His imagination, vitally concerned with the other world, projected itself into the sometimes horror, sometimes beauty. And if the first fruits are often repellent to us, it must always be remembered that his impulse, when it ceased to become a motive of life, became a motive of art and produced the supreme creation of "The Scarlet Letter."

Some ingenuity has been expended in the effort to draw a distinction between the social and economic conditions of the Pilgrims at Plymouth and the Puritans at Massachusetts bay, but from the standpoint of literary expression they are one people. Christened by their enemies in England, "Puritans," we find the Pilgrims adopting the name in the first and greatest of their books, William Bradford's account "Of Plymouth Plantation." These three words comprise the title of the manuscript whose history reads like a romance—"Pilgrim and Puritan Literature," by Arthur Hibson Quinn in Scribner's.

LOOK TO FUTURE OF FOREST

Experts Point Out Folly of Practices Which Prevent the Reproduction of the Trees.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That young growth in the woods, known popularly as "brush," is something to be rid of, is a prevalent but mistaken conception since a forest cannot maintain itself long without reproduction. For the sake of getting a scattering of green grass in the spring it is the short-sighted practice in hundreds of localities to fire the woods regularly. This results in killing thousands of small trees needed to continue the forest in the future, and also injures a large amount of marketable timber. Furthermore, such burning destroys a large amount of rich vegetable fertilizer.

Cattle and hogs in hardwood stands, and hogs in long-leaf pines, keep the forest from being restocked. Damage from insects can be reduced by cutting timber at the proper time of year and by utilizing lightning-killed trees without delay, since they harbor destructive pests. Cattle destroy the productive leaf mulch which keep the trees growing during long, dry spells. All large openings where light comes through into the forest should be filled with younger trees.

Telephone Defect Remedied.

Part of the construction of the telephone consists of a pocket containing a small quantity of granules of carbon through which the vibrations pass, and the difficulty with this has always been that its full efficiency has not been secured by reason of the fact that these particles become packed in and are therefore non-active. This condition is attributed to the moisture of the atmosphere. To remedy this defect some French inventors have made a microphone in which each individual grain of carbon is in a coil by itself so that no two grains can touch each other, being in contact only with the walls of the cell and diaphragm of the instrument. Experiments have shown that the new microphone is remarkably sensitive and gives a purer tone than any constructed on the old principle.—Indianapolis News.

Coaches to Go in the Tróssachs.

An epoch of more than local interest was closed recently, when the four-hand and other coaches formerly in use on the famous Tróssachs, route were brought under the auctioneer's hammer.

For more than 60 years the four-hand coach with its team of powerful horses and its post-boy in scarlet coat and white hat has been a familiar and picturesque feature of the season on the road between Challender and the Tróssachs.

The picturesque, four-hand coach is being displaced by the utilitarian motorcar, and a fleet of them is being put upon the road by the new company which has taken over the Tróssachs hotel from the Blair family. In whose hands the famous hospitality has been for more than half a century.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

A Native Flashlight.

The native's view of the English occupation in Egypt seldom gets into print. In Mr. Wilfrid Blunt's recent book, "Gordon at Khartoum," there is a refreshing if somewhat irrelevant exception that, however, dates back to the days before the great English soldier's fate was sealed by the delay of the relief expedition at Metemma.

Gordon approached all mundane matters from the point of view of an old Hebrew prophet, going to the Scriptures to find all necessary directions both for his temporal and for his eternal needs. This profound mysticism had another side, according to Nubar, the native critics referred to above. "Yes," said Nubar, "General Gordon reads the Bible all the morning—and then he gets up and hangs a man."

Deadly Enemy of Fruit Trees.

A familiar pest is the tent caterpillar, which is very destructive to all fruit trees. The reddish brown moth lays its eggs in the form of incomplete belts on the smaller branches, each belt or packet consisting of hundreds of tiny eggs glued together and covered with varnishlike substance, says the American Forestry Magazine. These eggs hatch early in the spring and the young caterpillars make their way to the nearest fork, where they spin a little tent of silk to protect them. They work out from the tent, feeding on the leaves and adding to the tent as they need more room. If there are many colonies working on a tree they soon strip it of leaves.

Oak in Hall of Fame.

The oldest white oak in Dedham, Mass., bearing the distinction of having been selected as suitable material for the frigate that still lies at anchor off Charlestown—Old Ironsides—has been nominated for a place in the hall of fame for trees being compiled by the American Forestry association of Washington, D. C. The amount offered was $70, but the offer was refused because the owner's wife, Mrs. William Avery, greatly admired the tree and prevailed upon her husband to spare it. This was about 1798.
