INVITED COME!

PEANUTS—$30,000,000 WORTH

How the humble peanut is closely allied with American history is told in the United States Department of Agriculture educational film, "Peanuts—$30,000,000 Worth."

This vegetable, which is not actually a nut but a ground pea, is a native South American plant and found its way to North America by way of Africa as food for prisoners on board slave ships in early Colonial days. Up to the time of the war between the States the plant was neglected by the southern planters and was grown mainly in small patches by the slaves. During the war Union soldiers foraging for food came upon the "goober pea" and found it palatable and nourishing. After Appomattox many of them carried the pods home with them, and the peanut won immediate favor in the North, and its culture has undergone great development in the South.

PLANTS PECAN GROVE WHEN ONE TREE PAYS

Raleigh, N. C. Oct.—"You see that tree near the house? It's a budded Stuart pecan tree that I planted eleven years ago," said Dan Hasty, of Laurinburg in a recent conversation with one of the horticultural workers of State College. "That tree was a mere switch when I planted it and I was not at all proud of the effort when my neighbors began to make fun of me for expecting it to bear nuts in my life time. I did not give it any particular attention, but, when it was 9 years old, to the surprise of my neighbors, I gathered from it 40 pounds of the choicest pecans you ever saw. That winter I spread some stable manure around it and the next year it yielded 75 pounds. I spread stable manure around it again the following winter and last fall harvested 150 pounds of fine pecans which I sold at 50 cents a pound."

Soon after planting this tree, Mr. Hasty became further interested in it till he now has a thriving young orchard and has been setting out trees of more than 200 trees that will soon be in bearing. What he cannot understand, he states is that more farmers do not plant pecan trees. He has noticed no falling off in the crops growing on the land among the trees and the grove costs him very little for cultivation. Mr. Hasty states that he could sell the nuts at ten cents a pound and make money growing them.

WILL HOLD SCHOOL FOR TRUCK GROWERS

Raleigh, N. C. Oct. 19—A short course and school for truck growers of southeastern North Carolina will be held at Wilmington on Thursday and Friday, November 5 and 6, according to an announcement from Glenn O. Randall extension horticulturist at State College.

One of the main purposes of the school is to carry to the truck growers the latest available information secured from experimental work done by the United States Department of Agriculture and the North Carolina Experiment Station. Staff members of the Department of Horticulture at State College, representatives of the State Division of Markets, Director I. O. Schaub of the Agricultural Extension Division and representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture will be on the program. An important feature will be a discussion by W. F. Callender of the Bureau of Crop Estimates in which will be shown the season of the year which should prove most profitable for the production of the lading truck crops.

Another important feature will be an address by H. H. Zimmerly of the Virginia Truck Station near Norfolk giving some facts about the culture of spinach. Director I. O. Schaub of the extension service will discuss the relation of extension work to the truck growers of the Wilmington section.

According to Mr. Randall, County Agent J. P. Herring of New Hanover County will have charge of local arrangements while the program will be in charge of the horticultural workers. Mr. Randall states that there will be a round table discussion in which the truck growers will be invited to give their experiences.

SOUTH DAKOTA STOCK KILLER CAUGHT BY GOVERNMENT HUNTER

Another notorious stock killer is dead. "Three Toes," a wolf said to rival the famous Custer wolf in the extent of stock killing and the way in which he has eluded capture, was successfully trapped in Harding County, S. Dak., last July. The honor of his capture goes to Junior Inspector Clyde F. Briggs, of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. More than 150 men have tried for "Three Toes" besides the men engaged in several big drives made by stockmen. Mr. Briggs took him in 15 days' trapping, using natural wolf scent as bait. The work was conducted in cooperation with the State Department of Agriculture.

This wolf has been a noted killer for more than 13 years, ranging over the western half of Harding County and northwestern Butte County in South Dakota; Bowman County, N. Dak.; and southeastern Carter County, Mont. It would be impossible to estimate his entire killings, but from available data and statements of stockmen who have lost heavily in recent years through his depredations, $50,000 is a conservative figure. He has destroyed several thousand sheep as well as a large number of cattle. Horses have not been counted against him, but he has killed many. He seldom killed only enough animals for food, but almost invariably destroyed from 10 to 30 head on each visit. He was known to have killed in less than a month after their arrival 34 registered Rambouillet bucks purchased at a cost of $35 each at a railroad point 75 miles distant. His kill of registered breeding sheep during the summer of 1924 was valued at $3,465. In 1923 his kill at three ranches was $6,700, and his total kill was estimated at $12,000. The largest single kill he made was 50 head of range sheep, breeding ewes with their lambs and yearlings. Other ranches have reported individual losses of 17 sheep in one night and 28 in one night. On an average these range sheep are considered worth $7 a head.

One of the difficulties in tracing the history of this wolf is the complete change in the livestock industry of Harding County within recent years. It was formerly a cow country, with many range horses. Sheep now constitute more than half the livestock industry. Ranch owners have changed, but the men who remember "Three Toes" over the whole of his career consider his taking one of the most important feats ever accomplished in the annals of wolf hunting.

Miss Bernice Wheatley Becomes Bride Of Evan S. Jarman

A simple but very impressive wedding took place yesterday when Miss Bernice Wheatley became the bride of Evan S. Jarman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Francis H. Craighill, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Earle D. Spurill, on South Pearl street.

The Spurill home was beautifully decorated with ferns, chrysantheums, cosmos and dahlias and a few friends and relatives gathered to witness the nuptial service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Wheatley, of Beaufort and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Jarman, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Jarman left after the ceremony for a wedding trip to points in the western part of Virginia. (Rocky Mount Telegram)

Rich deceased of Winston-Salem left $100,000 to a Miss Brenanger, with the condition that if she dies without issue before attaining the age of thirty the money will go to Buie's Creek Academy. The donor made the bequest not subject to taxation, but inheritance taxes on his estate were computed, with due allowances that Miss Brenanger, who is now nineteen will live to be thirty.

16,625 automobile license plates were issued by the license department of the State during the past month which brings the total in the State to 339,975.
