Hill Presents Forest To College Department

F. H. JETER
Raleigh, Dec. 29—A Christmas present of 721 acres of open and timber land lying next to his Quail Roost Farm in upper Durham County was presented to the forestry department of the school of agriculture at State College on December 21 by George Watts Hill, young capitalist and civic leader of Durham. Formal presentation of the deeds was made by Mr. Hill to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees. This valuable gift follows the donation of 378 acres made to the same department last June. The forest given last June is known as the George Watts Hill demonstration forest and is located on both sides of the Flint River about 17 miles north of Durham on the Roxboro Highway, two miles south of Rougemont. The new area adjoins the original gift and is in three tracts.

The land contains about 4,000 cords of pine wood now suitable for the market and more than 300,000 board feet of hardwood timber, says Dr. Julius V. Hofmann, head of the college forestry department. Some of the land is open and will be used for reforestation studies. The whole area will be used as a laboratory by forestry students and Dr. Hofmann plans to establish a permanent camp as soon as he can sell enough timber to get started.

Mr. Hill made a provision in his deed that all the income from the forests must be used by the forestry department alone for the carrying forward of its work. Dr. Hofmann plans to establish a nursery on the State College farm to begin immediately the growing of seedling trees for planting on the open areas.

In commenting on this additional gift to the College, Dr. E. C. Brooks, president, acclaimed Mr. Hill as a benefactor of the permanent prosperity of the State. The college will endeavor to train students in handling farm woodlands profitably as well as for commercial forestry positions, he said.
